On that evening he ate freely of pork which was not well cooked. About two hours after he grew violently sick, and terrible pains spread over his entire body. He was next taken with vomiting and purging passing blood and small pieces of flesh. A physician was summoned, who pronounced it trichinosis, and upon submitting a small piece of the flesh to the microscopical test in a net work of small muscles seventeen trichinae were found. Proper remedies were administered and the patient is slowly improving. Niez refuses to state from whom he purchased the pork.

Souer is about forty years of age, is a noted confidence man and turned tricks in Springfield, St. Louis and Baltimore.

Mrs. Garfield.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Mrs. President Garfield has left for New York.

XLVII CONGRESS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The Vice-President laid before the Senate the unfinished business a resolution for the election of Senate officers.

Mr. Harris referred to an article recently quoted by Mahone from the International Review, to the effect that the State of Pennsylvania repudiated $11,000,000 of her debt, and asserted there was no truth in the statement. Tennessee had at no time repudiated a single penny of her debt. It had been stated that Mr. Porter, of the Census Bureau, had been the author of the article, thus giving it a semi-official character.

Mr. Porter had indeed been the author, but had in a communication to him (Harris) denied that it was an official statement of the debt of Tennessee, and corrected various mistatements in the article.

A motion to go into executive session was lost; yeas 20, nays 21.

Mr. Johnson was permitted to offer a resolution, which was adopted, calling on the Attorney-General for certain papers in relation to the report of the Special Agent of the Treasury Department touching the Western Judicial District of Virginia.

After some time consumed in various dilatory motions, Mr. Dawes said he didn't care a copper whether one officer or another was in office, But he desired to have it settled before the country whether this was a government of the majority or not.

THE LAND FRAUDS.

Further Prosecution in the Federal Courts Abandoned.

U. S. District Attorney Bliss returned to town last evening from Washington, D. C., whither he had gone to consult with the Attorney General relative to the land fraud cases. The District Attorney states that the further prosecution of the land frauds will be abandoned in the Federal Courts, for the simple reason that the State Courts alone have jurisdiction over these matters. The proceedings in the Federal Court to this stage were had in this district upon the advice and direction of the department at Washington, and the conclusion is at length reached there, after consultation with Attorney Bliss, that further prosecution must be left to the State Courts.

The Grand Jury charged with the investigation of the matter will not return except for a formal discharge for, their services are of course no longer required. The blunder is a costly one for the Government, as great expenses were incurred in Grand Jury attendance, witnesses, the bringing of prisoners from Pittsburg and other places, etc. It is probable that bench warrants will now issue from the State Criminal benches for the parties who were arrested and lodged in jail here, awaiting the action of the Grand Jury. They have all since been released upon bonds which will now be cancelled.

Court Crumbs.

Judge Lindley is still engaged in the hearing of the partnership dispute, Holt vs. Simmons.

An attachment suit was filed to-day by Ryce & Walmsley against B. W. Hanna, of Indianapolis, to recover an indebtedness of $456 55. The defendant's claim against the McKee estate was allowed to-day for $1,000, hence this action.

Sennewald vs. Cal Hursch, judgment for possession or value, $32 and 1 cent damages; Gitchell vs. Kriedler, judgment for plaintiff for possession, $80 damages, $7 monthly value.

Probate Decisions.

The following decisions were rendered to-day in the Probate Court, in addition to those described elsewhere:

J. Q. A. Fritchey vs. estate of Pierre Guillory; demand for legal services rendered the former administratrix who made settlement with the present administrator; claim dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Estate of Julius C. Sunderland: motion overruled and probate of will affirmed. Wm. Zukowsky vs. estate of John Zukowsky; claim of administrator, judgement for amount claimed. M. D. Lewis, adminstrator of Gerhard Woerte, vs. Christine Huchttons, executrix of Henry Huchttons judgment for defendant. State ex rel Circuit Attorney vs. R. D. Lancaster, administrator of John Devinney, motion to pay a distributive share of legatee not claimed into State Treasury overruled.

The Simon Case.

Judge Holmer's attention is given to-day to the evidence in the Simon conflict, involving the father's right to recover possession and control of an eleven-year-old boy from the mother. The boy was abducted from the father's care at a funeral a few days since, and the contest between husband and wife, who have been separated for seven years, is very bitter in this instance. The testimony to-day bore upon the fitness of the father to have control of the boy. Evidence was offered to show that his relations with a house-keeper were not purely platonic. Judge Colvin in 1872 awarded the custody of the children to the mother.

Sessinghaus—Frost.

A formal application was made to-day in the United States Circuit Court in behalf of Mr. Sessinghaus for an inspection of the ballots of the November election in the Third District. Judge Treat said he would hear the application on Wednesday but it was quite a new proceeding in his experience. Joe Vance, a Broadway horse trader, was examined in rebuttal before the notary this morning. He testified that he did not hear the remark imputed to Mr. Sessinghaus by one of the Frost witnesses to the effect that if the Congressional Committee did not give him a seat he would have "the whole d—d crowd arrested."

Church Property Exemption.

City Counsellor Bell's opinion in reference to exemption of church property, submitted a few days since to the Board of Equalization, held that ground owned by a church becomes exempt from taxation from the time "that a church building is commenced thereon." The Board thought fit to differ with Counsellor Bell, and have ignored the appeals in respect of such property.

DYER'S JOKE.

How He Got Even With His Friends by a Plague of Notaries.

A paragraph appeared in the POST-DISPATCH of Saturday last, which was clipped into the addled Republican, as usual, on Sunday, which stated that "the Governor had appointed Messrs. Nichols, McCluney, Slayback and Campbell a commission, to whom all applications for appointment as notaries were to be submitted. The gentlemen themselves knew nothing of their appointment, but as a consequence the skies have simply been raining would-be Notaries upon them ever since. They have had candidates for supper, breakfast, dinner and tea, and to-day they are having candidates between meals. Over seven hundred young gent emen who have become saturated with the idea that what this city and country needs most is their services as notaries have tackled this commission with a vigor and a pertinacity which has made life a burden to the four unlucky gentlemen named. Mr. McCluney succumbed early on Sunday morning and left town ostensibly to go snipe shooting, leaving his house full of expectant notaries, with a fringe of them hanging on the gate and a delegation trying to soften the cook's heart so that they could gain entry by the back way. Notaries in posse have become a nightmare to him, and when this morning at 8 o'clock he met fifty-eight young men, each with a bundle of papers in his hands and an expectant glare in his eyes, waiting for him, at the bank, he is said to have positively shed tears. Mr. Nichols fared no better. He was swamped with notaries early on Sunday morning, and when he bobbed up serenely this morning he was confronted with dozens upon dozens more of candidates, who proved to his entire satisfaction that unless they were commissioned the commerce of this city would go to wreck and ruin. He is in hiding, too, and has sent word to his friends not to expect him back to town before the fool-killer has gone around and laid out the notaries. Col. A. W. Slayback has fled from the wrath to come, leaving a swarm of young men in complete possession of his premises. Mr. Given Campbell, it is said, took the matter much less philosophically than his confreres of the commission. To the first half dozen applicants who called Saturday evening he politely explained that there must be some mistake, as the Governor had not even notified him of his appointment—they had better examine into the matter farther. To the next half dozen he said that he had no time to discuss the question. To the third he addressed the request that they go to Halifax, but his ingenuity rapidly gave out before the Egyptain plague of notaries who flocked in on him. His only hope now is that he will be able to find the man who started the story, him, he will—but his threat is too awful.

An explanation of the rumor can be found in this theory. There is a game of poker, an innocent little game, too, played out at Col. Dyer's house, in which Messrs. McCluney and Nichols are experts. They put up a mee little game on Col. Dyer by way of vengeance for ill-luck by starting the rumor that Gov. Crittenden was to be the Colonel's guest during his coming visit to St. Louis. He was inundated with notaries, and this was his revenge, and it must be admitted that it is a complete one. The only thing that he regrets is that not alone these gentlemen but their friends and relations have suffered woefully. Anybody that was supposed to have any influence was just as thoroughly plagued as were the commissioners themselves.

The Timmons Children.

Judge Thayer to-day heard further evidence in the lively conflict for the custody of little Maggie Timmons and her two brothers. The little girl was removed by the father from the Methodist Orphan Home, where she had been placed by the mother, who is now seeking to recover her. The father gave a deed of adoption for the little girl to Mrs. Moore, of 119 South Fifth street, a highly respected lady of middle age who is of the Catholic persuasion, and who is not anxious to part with her. The mother desires to get possession of the child again in order that she may be returned to the Methodist Home for education. The superintendent of the Methodist Home, Mrs. Walker and a young lady attache, Miss Davis were on the witness stand to-day testifying to a violent scene when the father, a miserable looking object with one leg, removed the child by force from the Home. They always heard the child speak in the most affectionate terms of her mother, but when the child was placed on the stand she testified that the only thing she could remember of her mother's treatment was an attempt one day to hurt her. Judge Thayer after a patient hearing has taken the case under advisement until Monday next.

CITY PERSONALS.

Mr. Fisher, the attorney for the Pilgrim Chimes, is very confident that Judge Lindley will refuse the injunction.

Mr. Phil. Simmonds, representing Miss Genevie Ward, in "Forget-me-Not," arrived in town this morning.

Mr. Jacob Schaeffer, the new President of St. Marks Academy, is a prominent business man as well as an able scholar.

Rev. P. G. Robert, rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, will probably leave town this week for an extended vacation.

Mr. Julius Walsh, president of the Franklin Avenue Railroad, who has been confined to his house for the past month, was on the streets yesterday.

THE last lecture of the Public School Library course takes place this evening. Maj. F. F. Hilder will discourse on Prehistoric Missouri, and will illustrate the lecture with a number of rare archaeological specimens. Major Hilder is thoroughly up in his subject and the occasion will be a delightful one. The hour announced for the opening is 8 p. m.

WILLIAM LAFEYTH, who was a judge at the precinct at Seventh and Spruce at the late election, was arrested to-day on a charge of allowing a man to vote under an assumed name. William Judge voted at this precinct under the name of John Dunn, and claimed that he had been instructed to do so by a judge of election. Out of this the accusation against Lafeyth grows.

WM. HOBBS, who has been connected with the Globe-Democrat for many years, is prominently mentioned for the position of Assistant Fire Chief under Clay Sexton. Mr. Hobbs is recommended by a large number of insurance men and the business fraternity generally. In his capacity as a newspaper man he has been at every fire of any importance for the last ten years. His experience, gained by this active service, is very extensive, and would be of immense benefit to the department. Chief Sexton is very friendly to the applicant, and if a vacancy occurs the position will probably be offered to Mr. Hobbs.

An appeal for aid for the sufferers by the earthquake at Chios, signed Harriet S. Blaine, of Maine; Alice Key Pendleton, of Ohio; Mary C. Miller, of California; Anna L. Morton, of New York; Mary Montgomery Gibson, of Louisiana; Lydia McLane Johnston, of Virginia; Mary S. Logan, of Illinois; Malvina F. Harlan, of Kentucky, and Ellen Ewing Sherman, was received to-day by Secretary Morgan of the Merchants' Exchange. Subscriptions are solicited for the relief of the sufferers from those charitably inclined, and such subscriptions will be received by President McEnnis or Secretary George Morgan.

Exonerated from Blame.

In the inquest on the body of George B. Young, a boy who was run over, Coroner Frank to-day rendered the following verdict: That the deceased came to his death at 9:30 p. m., April 10, 1881, at 2011 Chestnut street, from the effects of internal injuries received about 10 a. m., April 15, on Twentieth street near Market, by being run over by a light spring wagon, and being stamped by the horse attached thereto, and the Coroner exonerates the driver, Henry Michel, from all blame.

MRS. COLLINS' JOURNEY.

Traveling a Thousand Miles to Find Her Husband Had Deserted Her.

From the N. Y. Sun, April 16.

Bridget Collins, a tired-looking young woman, arrived at the foot of Barclay street, New York, from St. Louis late on Thursday afternoon, and sat down on the stringpiece of the Hoboken Ferry pier to cry. She carried a two-year-old baby in her arms, which Policeman Dinsmore, who was there, says "was crying like seven devils." The policeman took her into the ferry house and she told him her story. She had been five weeks coming from St. Louis to New York and had reached here penniless, friendless and alone, except for her baby. Her home, when she had one, was in Worcester, Mass. Her parents live in Westboro, Mass. Her husband, Morris Collins, was a mason by trade, and eighteen months ago he went to St. Louis with a Boston contractor to work. He sent his wife money every week, and promised to send for her to go to him at St. Louis.

In February he sent her money for her expenses, and, after disposing of their few household effects in Worcester, she started alone with her baby to go to St. Louis. This was about the first of March. She went to the boarding house in St. Louis from which her husband had written to her regularly. He was not there. When she was told that ten days before he had started to New York in answer to a letter from another woman here, Mrs. Collins fainted. She was very ill for a week, and was cared for by her faithless husband's former landlady. Then she resolutely set out to return. She had no money, and was refused a railroad ticket by the company to which she applied. She slept in the depot by the permission of the men there, and for a week thereafter she slept with her child on a bench in that cheerless place. She had no food excepting some bread given her by some of the railroad men.

Her destitution and distress at last attracted attention, and she was given a pass on an emigrant train to Columbus. She was two weeks in from Columbus to Pittsburg. By short stages, Mrs. Collins says, she was helped on her journey by railroad officials until she reached a town in Pennsylvania—she cannot tell its name—where the Mayor, to whom she appealed for further aid, said he had no power to do anything for her. The Mayor's wife, however, touched with pity for the hapless condition of the woman and her child, sent them to a doctor, who treated the sick child, and then put Mrs. Collins on the cars for New York. This was Thursday morning, and on Thursday night the homeless woman arrived in New York, worn out and discouraged.

Policeman Dinsmore sent her with her child to a hotel in West street for the night, and when she presented herself at the Hoboben Ferry house again yesterday morning, Ferry Master Charles Gove gave her money for her breakfast. She was famished and ate ravenously. Her spirits were raised and she was filled with fresh courage. She had hoped to place her child in an asylum here and then secure work for herself in New York. She said her parents in Westboro had refused to receive her back again if she went to St. Louis and she was afraid to go to them. Policeman Dinsmore undertook to advise the woman more wisely, and, securing from the agent of the Norwich steamer a pass for her and her child, he sent them back to Massachusetts last night.

An Actor Thrashed.

From the Philadelphia Times, 13th.

A brief but lively encounter between two of the guests of the Peabody Hotel furnished a morsel of gossip for the remainder last evening. C. J. Dougherty, of St. Louis, called from the supper table into the hallway Charles Wilson, of the "Buffalo Bill" company, now drenching the stage of the Walnut Street Theatre with gore, and demanded: "Is your name Wilson?" Receiving an affirmative response the querist cried: "Take that for insulting my wife," at the same time dealing the actor a blow upon the face which knocked him from his feet, his head coming in violent contact with the edge of a marble step in the fall. Wilson was picked up insensible, with an ugly gash on the back of his head, and carried to his room. His injuries are not dangerous, but he will probably not appear on the boards of the Walnut again this week.

Mr. Dougherty was thus led to take the law into his own hands through complaints made by his wife that Wilson was paying her disagreeable attentions. He has been sending Mrs. Dougherty letters and confectionery, all of which were indignantly returned, and yesterday he was ejected from the hotel for trying to force his way into her apartment.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN A. SCUDDER have returned home from a three weeks' repose at the Arkansas Hot Springs.

THE Henry Frank is making her last trip this season in the Memphis and New Orleans trade. She may come to St. Louis.

THE noted Anchor Line steamer City of Alton is receiving to leave for New Orleans to-morrow. Bixby, master, Mason, clerk.

CAPT. JOS. BRYAN and part of the crew of the Thompson Dean came home from New Orleans this morning, where the boat is laid up.

COMMODORE SANFORD B. COULSON, manager of the Coulson Line of steamers on the Upper Missouri, is in the city and stopping at Barnum's.

MULLEN & HOPPIUS are painting the steamers Grand Tower, E. C. Elliott and Illinois. The latter enters the St. Louis and Keokuk trade.

THE river at 12 m. to-day was 27¼ feet by the Government gauge, a fall of two inches since yesterday. Look out now for a rapid tumble in water—the boom's "busted."

THE Jno. L. Rhoades, Capt. H. B. Cock, J. C. Fisher, clerk, takes her departure for Pittsburg this evening. She will be followed to-morrow by the Wyoming, Jenkins & Sass, agents.

THE New Orleans Democrat says: The Thompson Dean was taken to her old laying-up quarters yesterday, and her crew, with the exception of Mr. Archie Wood, all left for St. Louis. The Dean has made eight trips in the cotton trade since the first of September last—two to Cincinnati and one to St. Louis. In her first eight trips she brought 14,789 bales cotton, 7 bags seed cotton, 43,625 sacks cotton seed, 2,512 sacks oil cake and 225 barrels oil.

NEW ORLEANS Picayune, Friday: The Chas. P. Chouteau left for St. Louis last evening, under Anchor Line orders. She will make a few trips for that line and will then undergo some slight repairing preparatory to re-entering the Memphis trade in the fall. Capt. Wm. H. Thorwegan has bought 7,000 acres of cotton land between Helena and Memphis, and is going to raise 9,227 bales, which he will bring down in one load on the 7th of December.

A PITTSBURG telegram of Saturday says: One of the engineers who was on the F. Y. Batchelor while she was frozen up all winter on the Upper Missouri, 125 miles above Fort Buford, has reached here. He says the Batchelor was not sunk, as reported; that she was forced out on the ice by the high water; she was not injured, and can be pulled into the river, in his opinion, without much trouble. Pilot Frank Gould, whose license was revoked some time ago by the Local Inspectors in consequence of the collision between the towboat Jos. W. Gould and the propeller Stella McClosky, and who appealed, has had his revocation modified to a three months' suspension by Supervising Inspector Fehrenbatch. The investigation of the Emma Graham and Montana collision cannot be concluded until those boats arrive.

New Water Ways.

As it has become evident that railroads cannot compete with the barge system of transportation to the seaboard, shippers and others interested in the movement of grain from the Northwestern States have begun to cast about for some other mode of conveying their produce, and a convention has been called to meet in Davenport, May 25, to ask Congressional aid for the construction of an all water route from the Mississippi River at Rock Island eastward. The plan first proposed was simply the extension of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, so as to make a continous watercourse from Chicago, via Hennepin, to Rock Island. A correspondent of the Davenport Gazette calls attention to another plan, however, which will no doubt receive careful consideration. He proposes to connect the Mississippi River at Rock Island with Lake Erie, by means of a canal via Hennepin and Kankakee, Ills., and Logansport, Ind., to Toledo. A canal is now in operation between Logansport and Toledo, and another connects Hennepin and Kankakee. To make the route complete, therefore, required, the filling up of two links, one of sixty-five miles from Rock Island to Hennepin, and the other of about eighty miles from Kankakee to Logansport (or, if constructed by way of Chicago, one hundred and ten miles). The construction of about one hundred and fifty miles of canal would thus open up a water course from the Mississippi river, through Lake Erie and the Erie Canal, to the seaboard, and, it is thought, relieve the people of the Northwest from their present dependence upon railroads. It may pertinently be suggested that there is still another plan which the Davenport Convention might take into consideration, and that is the construction of a good deep channel from Chicago to the Lower Mississippi. The expense of opening the latter route would no doubt be less, while the advantages to be derived would probably be much greater.

Horrors of Trichinosis.

Cleveland (O.) Special to Chicago Tribune.

A strange case of trichinosis was discovered on the South Side this afternoon, where a family of five persons were found suffering from the effects of the terrible disease. The following, as stated by the doctor who investigated, are the circumstances connected with the case: A few days ago Mr. Degener, a German, came to the doctor's office with his eyes badly swollen and inflamed. The proper remedies were prescribed, and a day or two after the gentleman returned and stated that his eyes were all right, but that he felt a peculiar and painful sensation in the muscles of his body, particularly those of the limbs and jaws. After a careful diagnosis, the conclusion was reached that the patient was suffering with rheumatism, and medicines were administered to that effect. The remedies not being effective, inquiry showed that the patient was in the habit of eating pork and sausage. The doctor immediately submitted some of the pork and sausage to a microscopic examination, and found both pieces swarming with trichinæ. He then called upon the patient, and after great persuasion got him to allow a piece of flesh to be cut from the biceps muscle of his left arm. This was also placed under the microscope and found to contain a number of trichinæ. A piece of pork no larger than a pin head was seen to be alive with trichinæ. On visiting the home of the patient the physician was surprised to find the wife sick in bed, exhibiting the same alarming symptoms as her husband; and a daughter, 16 years old, and her younger brother and sister, all complained of pains in the muscles of their limbs and necks. Mr. Degener stated that the sausage was bought raw, taken home, and after being smoked it was eaten. The man especially is in a critical condition. He lies upon his back and cannot move without excruciating pain, and it is only with the greatest difficulty that he can take nourishment.

Multiplication by Machinery.

From the New York Herald.

Mr. Ramon Verea, a Spanish resident of New York, has been devoting his leisure hours for several years in developing a machine that will multiply and divide and has finally succeeded. It will produce a product having fifteen figures, and the factors may be of nine or less than six figures. A turn of a small crank once for each figure in the multiplier displays the product on a disk. The work is almost instantaneous and the accuracy of it unimpeachable. The machine consists of ten circular plates placed vertically, and on the edge of each are figures from 1 to 9 inclusive and zero. On the sides of these are points which form in substance a multiplication table. Suppose 9 is to be multiplied by 6. The first plate is turned so that nine shows on top: the other factor is then shown on a wheel belonging to a similar set as those on which nine is shown. When the crank is turned the multiplicand plate turns six-ninths of a revolution, and a point on the fourth concentric circle of points on the side of the plate is presented on one side and a point on the fifth concentric circle on the other. These two points meet each a small tongue which operates upon the product box, where the the result is directly shown. The mechanism by which the product is recorded is too complicated to admit of a description except at great length. There are a series of wheels worked upon, each of them graduated as to size and shape with the concentric circles on the plates. It might be said that in the multiplication, the additions necessary are made simultaneously with the multiplication. For example, multiplying 56 by 7 the process is 7 times 6 are 42, 7 times 5 are 35 and 4 are 39—product, 392. With the machine the work is instantaneous. When the wheel is turned the record is first made of 42 and then of 35. The figure in the last place of 35, that is the 5, is at once added to the figure in the place of the tens of the other number, and the entire product "bobs up serenely" as the crank completes the revolution. If the multiplier were a double number, say 56 by 27, another turn of the crank would make the multiplication and addition complete. To prove the operation pressing a button throws into gear a new set of wheels, and a turn of the crank reduces all the numbers in the product box to zero. Should zero not at once appear it would prove the original operation was wrong.

Mr. Verea explains that he did not make the machine either to sell its patent or to put it into use, but simply to show that it was possible and that a Spaniard can invent as well as an American. A number of tests that were made in the presence of a Herald reporter and other visitors were conducted with facility and accuracy. The operation of multiplying 900,000 by 9,000 was correctly performed by the machine while the reporther and an accountant were trying to write out the product which they had already arrived at by a mental process.

MR. BLAINE, Assistant President of the United States, is enjoying bad health, and it is arranged that he is going down the Potomac River to sniff the life-giving breezes from the ocean. Mr. BLAINE is always more or less sunstruck in a great crisis.

A NEW decree issued from St. Petersburg forbids any male Russian, between the ages of 10 and 18, from going abroad without the consent of the Government. This is done to break up the custom of sending boys into civilized countries to be educated.

THERE was a rattling gallinaceous tournament in the suburbs of the city yesterday, by way of compliment to the new Mayor, who is said to find as much delight in contemplating a dispute between game cocks as old LOUIS XI used to extract from flying his ferocious falcons.

LONGSTREET is coming home from Turkey, and there is talk of sending the ancient lizard, HORACE MAYNARD, back to the Sublime Porte to represent our enlightened Government. Nothing but the exhausted condition of the Porte's exchequer would prevent the Sultan from regarding the official return of MAYNARD to his dominions as a just cause for war.

A STRIKING street car driver in Cincinnati claims that he has no time to cultivate his family, and says that his wife is compelled to hold the baby up to the window and point him out as he rides by in order that the youngster may become acquainted with its paternal progenitor. And yet we are proverbially assured that it is a wise child that knows its own father, even under the most favorable circumstances.

FROM recent dispatches it is quite evident that Lord BEACONSFIELD has taken a new lease on life and will be able to spend a year or two reading the elegant obituary notices of himself printed in enterprising American journals. BEACONSFIELD should form a combination with CHARLES O'CONOR, the eminent New York attorney, who went down into the valley of death a few years ago, and travel about the world as the pair that whipped the man with the scythe in a fair fight.

THE humorous editor of the Republican, who recently mixed up CAPT. CUTTLE'S remarkable time-piece and confounded the skeleton-worshipping TRADDLES with the indifferent Mr. TOOTS, has capped the climax by speaking of the "posthumous speeches" of THOMAS CARLYLE. The suggestion that the Republican be hereafter known as "a posthumous newspaper" is a good one. The Republican is actually dead, and all its utterances are of a purely posthumous character.

IN not hanging HESSY HELFMANN last Friday the Russian Government lost a great opportunity to strengthen the bonds which are said to unite the Empire to the free and glorious Republic of the United States of America. HESSY kept a boarding-house in St. Petersburg, which was much frequented by the Nihilistic conspirators. She seems to have been the Mrs. SURRATT of St. Petersburg. Until Russia has executed a woman for keeping a boarding-house she can hardly expect to rank among the enlightened nations of the earth.

A MORNING contemporary announced yesterday the existence of a gentleman at St. Charles who has seen "the weary winter's sun return" one hundred and three times. If the proprietors of the St. Louis Republican don't avail themselves of the rare experience of this venerable person, they will be false to themselves and their principles. Think of the additional prestige and veneration they could secure for their paper by simply proclaiming that their editor was born in 1778, or twenty years before the Republican itself saw the light of day!

IT is announced that DAENZER, the diabolical canine of the Anzeiger, is going to Europe this summer. To some people this may appear like a premonition of another civil war, for Mr. DAENZER always makes it a point to absent himself from this country in time of internecine strife. We rather suspect that he has purchased that historic European ticket from his friend OVERSTOLZ and is simply going abroad to show the puny potentates and noble noodles of Hesse-Darmstadt how gloriously he has expanded since taking on the broad phylactery of American citizenship.

MR. SCHURZ has recovered from the depression incident to his retirement from official life, and has formally resumed the editorial control and management of the Westliche Post. He let fly a double-leaded column of thunder on the Senatorial situation yesterday morning, ornamented with a fringe of sheet lightning, which must have played sad havoc with the calculations of the weather bureau. Arrangements have been made in Washington to translate the Jove-like utterances of MR. SCHURZ as soon as they appear, so that their full force will be felt by the Senatorial pigmies who are scratching around the National Dust-pile.

AN editorial in the Globe-Democrat of today urges our citizens to make an effort to secure the World's Fair for St. Louis. We believe there has been no decree making it obligatory upon the people of the United States to get up a World's Fair. Under the Constitution, as amended, any city can go into the World's Fair business without even giving a bond. All that is necessary is to raise about $3,000,000, build a lot of exhibition halls and cry out, "Run here, everybody!" It is quite plain that the scheme to get up a World's Exhibition at New York will fall through. Perhaps St. Louis can do better. Our understanding is that Dr. MCLEAN, the inventor of the imperishable pills and the most destructible fire-arms imaginable, is so anxious to bring the children of the earth here to see his bloody machinery that he will subscribe a quarter of a million toward the Fair himself.

The St. Louis POST-DISPATCH can ease its soul on one little point. Gov. Grittenden will not interfere with the penitentiary regime. Otherwise his household and personal expenses might become palpably greater.—[Kansas City Times.

It strikes us that there is in this paragraph an "insinuendo," as Mrs. MALAPROP would say, hardly warranted by the facts. We have heard that the relations between Gov. CRITTENDEN and Warden WILLIS were of the most intimate and poetic character, and we have even gone so far as to intimate ourselves that there ought to be a divorce, mensa et thoro, between the Executive Mansion and the Penitentiary, but nobody can make us believe that Gov. CRITTENDEN is the recipient of favors from the prison managers that tend to cheapen his household expenses. It may be that he occasionally enjoys a ride in the Warden's carriage, but he certainly would not allow his friendship for the prison officials to stand between him and an act of humanity toward the poor wretches whom the State has undertaken to punish and reform.

THE able editor of the Sedalia Democrat, who seems to draw his inspiration from the mediæval St. Louis Republican, asserts that the Missouri Penitentiary is not made unattractive enough. He would add to the present cow-hiding system all the terrors of the Spanish Inquisition, to the end that the criminal classes may give the State of Missouri a wide berth. It strikes us that, with the hot-iron treatment, the black dungeon and the raw hide, our prison ought to have a repelling influence, and yet if the Courts would do their duty we would be able to show as fine a list of prison boarders as any State in the Union. The fact is, no man was ever deterred from the commission of a crime by the fear of legal punishment. He always expects to escape. The treatment that he receives in prison may have much to do with his future career. If he is fresh in crime he may easily be brutalized and degraded and twisted into a professional law breaker and enemy of society. JOHN HOWARD, and other gentlemen almost as wise and practical as the editor of the Sedalia Democrat, have spent their lives and their fortunes in modifying the prison systems of the world, and experience shows that more good results are obtained from the humane treatment of prisoners than were ever derived from the BRADBURY style of raw-hiding, and scarifying with hot irons.

THE revival of the discussion about the sadly-fought battle of Shiloh "is nuts" for Mr. JOMINI REED, the military critic and tactician of the Cincinnati Gazette. Mr. REED had just concluded his sixty-seventh essay on MCCLELLAN'S campaigns, and had sent a bound file of the Gazette containing his productions to Generals ROBERTS and JOUBERT, the opposing commanders in the Transvaal, when the Shiloh shindy was sprung on him. He fell to work at once and since the day of the meeting of the Society of the Army of Tennessee he has been as busy as his Satanic Majesty at a country fair. He has already written twenty-five columns about the battle, accompanied by maps and diagrams, and has convicted Gen. SHERMAN of prevarication, heterophemy, heterepiscopy, inadequacy and treason in a mild form. One great good has already grown out of this discussion. The country knows where its greatest military genius is located now. Its eye is on Mr. REED, and in the event of another war he will be snatched out of his cosy retreat in the Gazette library and placed at the head of our armies with a suddenness that will cause Old CINCINNATUS and his plow to be forgotten. Mr. REED has the eye severe and beard of formal cut that is ascribed to the critic. Mounted on a fiery barb and charging with sword drawn at the head of an army corps, he would look almost as terribly picturesque as GENGHIS KHAN or TIMOUR the Tartar.

The Protest of a Rosicrucian.

ST. LOUIS, April 18, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

My attention has been called to an article in your issue of the 14th inst., headed "The Rosy Cross." I must confess it startled me not a little to see such an announcement, knowing so much as I do of the Rosicrucian order. I know there is a degree in the Masonic order called "Knights of the Red Cross," but which is in no way connected with the ancient sect of ascetics known as Rosicrucians, or do the Masons claim any such connection. Whilst the Masonic order is simply speculative, the Rosicrucians are operative, according to their cabalistic teachings handed down from sire to son, and to those only who are found worthy. The Rosicrucians, as a sect of ascetics, do not permit any show or parade. They never make feasts for gluttons or gormandisers. They are temperate in all things; they are philosophers in possession of the "White Stone," and also of some of the elixir of life, which they work for through years of toil. Rosicrucians are all old men; not one admitted into their college who has not lived on this planet half a century at least, and become well qualified in the preliminaries, intuitively, etc. Rosicrucians have no lodges or never had, no "Veiled Prophets," no would-be patriarchs, any more than was Jesus Christ the humble Nazarene.

The ancient ascetic sect of Rosicrucians have but one recognized college in the world, and through which all members of the order must be admitted into the brotherhood-elect of the chosen few. It is not to be wondered at that in this age of fraud, deceit and corruption, with its shoddy glucose and oleomargerine, that the heaven-born order of the Rosy Cross is now called upon to suffer by name or comparison. It has been for some time the desire and intention of the order to establish a branch college in America, but as yet the cabalistic number of brothers are not in the United States. It is hoped the gentlemen who are getting up the May festival or frolic will do so under some other and more appropriate name.

Respectfully,
A ROSICRUCIAN.

Not Caught Yet.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Some two or three weeks ago you had an article in your paper stating that most of the articles stolen from my residence, 1610 Mississippi avenue, had been recovered through Mr. Huthsing, who traced the thief to Kansas City, etc. Since all this time I have heard nothing from Mr. Huthsing, who has neither caught the thief nor recovered one single article. Our Police Department, whom I have furnished a printed list of the articles stolen, offering fifty per cent of their value reward, has found no trace whatever of the thief or stolen articles. Among the articles stolen are some old rings and hair bracelets, of value only to my family, for the recovery of which I offer a liberal reward, and no questions asked.

Yours truly, CHAS. H. TEICHMANN.

Wanted—An Egg-Hatcher.

ST. LOUIS, April 18.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Please answer through the columns of your valuable paper where the electric apparatus for hatching eggs can be bought, and at what price. Also how much time is required for hatching eggs with such an apparatus. In case that you should find it too great a loss of time for you to answer such an out-of-the-way question, please state where I could get the desired information.

R. G.

[While we do not undertake to conduct a commission business we print this in the hope that it will catch the eye of the man who has the patent egg-hatcher.—ED. P.-D.]

Can This Be Possible?

ST. LOUIS, April 18, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Why is it that the police allow the "brace game" of Torrence's to run on Washington avenue, opposite the Lindell Hotel?

SUBSCRIBER.

Rasping the Old Man.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

A gentle dullness overspreads the pages of Mr. Jefferson Davis. He conveys such thrilling information as that Stonewall Jackson "was a West Virginian," and that the heart of Robert E. Lee "was consecrated to the public service." We have fears that Davis will prove to be a solemn ass, who spoiled the lost cause largely by being an ass.

A Rural Rooster's Wail.

From the Saline County Democrat.

If the Republican and POST-DISPATCH had behaved as well before the St. Louis election as they have since the result of the election was made known, it might have been entirely different. It is not to be expected of us rural roosters to keep that city Democracy in the traces, but when it comes to the country "districts" we'll show you how it is.

The Ponderous Chicago Papers.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

We are sorry to see the Chicago papers weigh more than two pounds each. The enterprising publishers should draw the line somewhere. It is wrong for Storey, Medill and the Nixons to be bulling the market for straw, rags and cordwood, to say nothing of lampblack and linseed oil.

Ornithologically Considered.

From the Chicago Times.

Dawes is really another kind of bird. He's a popupinjay.

Knocked Blooming Silly.

From the Kansas City Times.

The St. Louis Republican has suddenly developed a humorous streak. We have, with deep anguish, observed several frivolous paragraphs in its editorial columns of late. We fear the recent political pile driver in St. Louis must have struck the Republican gang on the funny-bone.

The Voice of God.

From the Courier-Journal.

John Sherman advances the proposition (not entirely new) that the voice of the majority is the voice of God. It is remarkable how earnestly John Sherman put his fingers in his ears when the "voice of God" was heard in 1876, and swore he would not listen to it.

Our Only Hope.

From the Kansas City Times.

When the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH has existed long enough to present an array of seventy-eight sons, sons-in-law and brothers-in-law as candidates for front row seats at the public teat, its influence will doubtless be recognized by the St. Louis Republican.

Outraged Ohio.

From the Chicago Times.

It is sad to note that Stanley Matthews is still deprived of his inheritance, a seat on the Supreme Bench. This treatment of a distinctly Ohio man is an outrage upon Buckeyedom.

A Generous Act.

Yesterday morning Chief McDonough received a telegram from Cincinnati asking to have an undertaker at Union Depot at 8 o'clock this morning. Deputy Coroner Praedicow was on hand with City Undertaker Andy Brown, who had a nicely furnished coffin. When the Vandalia train arrived a German family named Steinert were in the emigrant car on their way to Texas with the body of their child, which died of marasmus on the road. They were destitute of means and desired to take the little corpse with them. Mr. Brown very generously made them a present of the coffin and they continued on their way.

Anyone contemplating the purchase of an article of Silverware for Family Use or for a BRIDAL PRESENT should certainly examine these superb goods, particularly as the prices asked (all marked in plain figures) are even lower than those of inferior makes and qualities.

Fell From a Window.

While cleaning windows last Saturday evening Josephine Pilz lost her balance and fell to the sidewalk, a distance of about twenty feet, at 3038 South Eighth street, receiving severe internal injuries, the exact extent of which the attending physician could not determine, though he considers them extremely serious. The young woman was badly bruised about the body.

Missing From Friends.

The police are looking for Carl Bartholmais, a German boy, 13 years of age, who came to this country only a short time ago and is unable to speak English. They have been asked to find the boy who ran away from Nic Dittmeyer's, No. 1212 Franklin avenue, and has been missing since. He is stout built and has a fair complexion.

Scenes Before the Paris Salon.

From a recent Letter.

Sunday, March 20, was the last day for the reception of pictures at the salon. There are always more pictures brought in on the last day than on any other, and the last hours of the afternoon they pour in by the thousand, some in wagons, some in hand-carts, some on the backs of porters and commissionnaires. It is considered one of the sights of Paris to witness the closing hours of the reception. Great numbers of artists and art students flock to the Palais de l'Industrie in the Champs-Elysees and watch the paintings as they are carried in. The policemen have their hands full to keep order. Last Sunday afternoon one of them asked a young miss to move back. "But I wish to look!" said she. Whereupon the policeman responded smiling: Regardez-moi, mais ne me touchez pas—Look at me, but don't you touch me! This remark brought down the house, of course. Then two full-grown men mounted on a tall lamp-post, and from that coigne of vantage secured a good view of the pictures as they were carried in. But the Argus-eyed policemen spied them out, and, exclaiming, "Voila, two infants up the lamp-post!" made the aspiring ones descend, greatly to the satisfaction, loudly expressed, of the crowd who had been envying them their position. That is the touch of nature which "makes the whole world kin!" The comments passed by the noisy students from the Ecole des Bedux-Arts upon the various pictures were often amusing, sometimes witty, always good-natured—and noisy.

Spreading Small Pox.

From the New York Tribune.

Private letters from Reading state that the present terrible outbreak of small pox among the children of the Berks County Almshouse is due to the fact that a bed quilt was taken from a cot on which a convalescent patient was lying and thrown into a yard for the children to play with. The infected spread was then put into the laundry and washed with the children's clothes. Thirty cases was the immediate result of this almost incredible carelessness. For the spread of diphtheria or malarial and typhoid fevers there is always an excuse to be found in the popular ignorance of the causes of these diseases; but the poorest and most illiterate know how the poison of small pox is carried; it is impossible that the authorities in this institution could be ignorant of it. There is no way of accounting for their carelessness but by criminal indifference. Dr. Beard, in his recent volume on the treatment of the insane in Europe, states that a higher class of attendants, nurses and keepers in asylums, hospitals and such institutions, are procurable there than in this country for the low salaries paid to such officials, Judging from the facts of this case, the salaries paid in the Berks County Almshouse must be exceptionally low. It would, we suggest, pay the taxpayers to raise them; that is, if they are willing to put their dollars in the scale with the lives of the unfortunate pauper babies committed to their charge.

A One-Shirted Nobleman.

From the New York Tribune.

Bogus and impecunious noblemen have long had a soft spot in their hearts for this country, and no wonder, considering the prosperous career in clubs and private houses which has been so confidently opened to so many of them. In England, however, the home of "real live lords," these scions of noble houses generally realize they would be too apt to come to grief. But an amusing action for breach of promise was recently heard at the London Guildhall, the details of which prove that all the fools in the world don't live on this side of the Atlantic. Leon de Garden, a Belgian viscount, pledged his heart, his title and his ancestral estates to the daughter of an English stone-cutter, who, at various times since 1877, has accommodated him with various small loans amounting in the aggregate to £35. The viscount was evidently in sore need of money, for in several letters to his affianced which were produced in evidence, he admitted the alternate purchase and sale of a shirt as a matter of utmost importance. The jury found a verdict for the stone-cutter's daughter for £300, which was a generous estimate of the affections of a one-shirted nobleman.

CAPT. HERCULES has a C., B. & Q. railroad ticket at the Second District Station awaiting a claimant. It was found in an alley at Columbus and De Kalb streets.

FAITH.

Faith is the soul's clear sight, the inner eyes
That gaze abroad with more than mortal powers
Beyond the limits of this world of ours;
Through the dark valley that betwixt us lies
It sees the pearly gates of Paradise;
The golden streets, the fair immortal flowers
That bloom perennial in angel bowers,
And catches glimpses of the heavenly prize.
The shadows fly before its prescient ken,
As melt the mists before the rising day;
Through the thick gloom it tracks a shining way
From the dim "now" to the eternal "then."
Faith is a growth of pure, immortal birth,
Oft mixed with doubts as virgin gold with earth.

JOHN ASKHAM.

CONCENTRATED WEALTH.

The New Yorkers Gathering Up All the Money.

New York Letter to Cincinnati Gazette.

The rapid centralization of wealth in the hands of a few leading operators is one of the most striking features of the age, and as it requires that an immense multitude should be poor in order to make one capitalist, it follows that such a state of things is not advantageous to the public. Here is Jim Keene, who came from the West, and soon proved a dashing operator in produce as well as stocks. He is estimated at $2,500,000, while Sam. Sloan is down for double that sum. Sloan is President of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road, with a salary of $10,000 a year. He can, however make vastly more in speculation. Ex-Gov. E. D. Morgan is estimated at $9,000,000. He made money rapidly in trade, and the house which he founded is still in operation, the firm being E. D. Morgan & Co. He has, however, also made enormous sums in Wall street, and probably now has an income of $1,000 a day. His partner, Solon Humphreys, who has for many years controlled the operations of the business firm, is estimated at $3,000,000. He came to this city from Hartford forty years ago, and became clerk for Morgan, who discovered his ability and gave him the promotion he so admirably deserved.

GOULD, SAGE AND OTHERS.

Jay Gould is estimated at $70,000,000. He makes now on an average $6,000,000 a year, and hence will soon become a leading capitalist. Russell Sage, though old enough to be Gould's father, is only rated at $30,000,000. He began life a poor boy, and was a clerk for some years in a Troy grocery house, where he afterward became a partner. He made money by industry and economy, and soon was able to enter the wider field of railway speculation. This gave him a sufficient capital to remove to Wall street, where he has been a leading gambler in stock privileges. He sells "puts, calls and straddles" to the fools who are addicted to this practice, and has made an immense fortune out of the money they throw away. D. O. Mills, who is reckoned at $5,000,000, accumulated the largest part of his wealth in California, but has also been highly successful in Wall street. He has recently made a heavy purchase of Wall street property, and will erect one of the finest commercial buildings in this city. Samuel J. Tilden is estimated at from $9,000,000 to $12,000,000, most of which he has made in speculation. He began this practice when a young man, and his intimate acquaintance with Wall street men gave him an unusual advantage. This has been admirably improved, until Tilden may now be considered the richest bachelor in America. Moses Taylor, with $5,000,000, is the richest of our bank presidents. H. G. Marquand rates about the same as Jim Keene. Wm. H. Vanderbilt and his two sons (Cornelius and William) are worth $100,000,000. Cornelius K. Garrison is rarely mentioned now, as he seldom appears in business transactions, but he is good for a dozen millions.

THE STUARTS AND OTHERS.

Robert L. Stuart, the survivor of the sugar manufacturing brothers, is estimated at $6,000,000. Judge Hilton is of equal wealth. He got all this through his acquaintance with A. T. Stewart, the merchant prince, who made him heir to $1,000,000. The Judge then made an exchange with Mrs. Stewart, which was immensely in his favor. Robert L. Kennedy, nephew of James Lenox, is estimated at $5,000,000. He gave a $10,000 picture to the Lenox Institute (Munkascy's Milton), and will no doubt make some other handsome benefactions. Robert and Ogden Goelet, who are the heirs of the immense Goelet estate, are estimated at $20,000,000. The Astors are worth more than $100,000,000, and are carefully hoarding their wealth. Miss Harriet Lenox, who is the heir of her brother James, is probably worth $2,000,000, the interest of which she gives away in the manner formerly practiced by her philanthropic brother. Miss Lenox is no doubt dispensing a larger amount in charity than any other woman in America. Peter Cooper is the oldest of our capitalists, and also the most philanthropic. He is now in his ninety-first year, but notwithstanding his advanced age is still in possession of all his faculties. He is estimated at $7,000,000, all the fruit of industry and good management. His institute continues to be a grand public benefaction, and he has recently added all the modern improvements. George Law is next in point of age, being now eighty-two. He weighs nearly 300 pounds, and this has seriously impaired his activity. He owns the Dry Dock Bank, and the largest part of the Eighth Avenue Surface Railroad, his entire wealth being estimated at $3,000,000. What a contrast between these two last mentioned capitalists, for, while Cooper has been lavish in his benefactions, George Law has never been known to do anything for philanthropy. He rose from the working class, but does not appear to have any sympathy with it or with humanity in any shape.

HEBREW WEALTH.

This class of our citizens holds an immense amount of wealth, but it is chiefly in personal property which escapes taxation and is more easily handled than real estate. The Hebrews are increasing in a very marked degree both in property and influence. Old as the race may be, it exhibits no effete features. While other nations have gone out of existence, and merely hold a place in history, the Jews are on the advance, and are rapidly growing in the power of gold. One of the richest Hebrews in this city is August Belmont, who is probably worth $3,000,000. This has been made in the banking business, in which Belmont, as agent for the Rothschilds, has had the greatest advantages. He has avoided speculation, and applied himself solely to this specialty, investing his profits in first class securities. He has never been addicted to real estate purchases, and the splendid house which the family occupy in the Fifth avenue was given by him to his wife as a bridal present. Belmont does not associate with the Jews, and his family attend the Episcopal Church, but personally speaking he acknowledges the control of the Hebrew customs in which he was brought up. Belmont is now past three score and ten. He came hither from Germany forty years ago, his name being then Schonberg, which he changed into the present more euphonious title. Aside from Belmont the record of Hebrew wealth includes the Seligmans, the Bernheimers, the Marx family, the Stetheimers, the Sterns and others who might be mentioned in the same connection.

Edison's Bamboo Discovery.

From the New York Sun.

The large building, formerly a private residence, on the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Fourteenth street, was illuminated last evening with from fifty to sixty Edison lights.

The incandescent loops of charred bamboo glowing steadily and pleasantly to the eye, in their air-tight glass globes. The loops are not shaped like horseshoes, as were those made of charred bristol board with which he formerly lighted Menlo Park. They are a little over two inches long and shaped like a capital U. The charred bamboo was a mere thread.

When all the lights in a large upper back parlor were turned out except one the paragraphs in the "Sunbeams" column of The Sun could be read easily. A throng of invited guests passed from room to room. The building is occupied as the offices of the company, and Mr. Edison personally did the honors of the evening. In the cellar a ten-horse power single piston engine ground out the electricity.

Mr. Edison delivered a little lecture in response to the fire of questions poured in upon him by his guests. He took out a large map of the down-town district which he proposes to light with an 1,800 horse power engine. The district is bounded by Spruce and Wall streets, and by Nassau street and the East River. The district was represented on the map in black, and every gas jet now in use in the district, 15,560 in all, was represented in its proper place by white dots. The engine was to be located, he said, not far from the intersection of Gold and John streets.

He said that he could sell power enough in that district to enable him to pay the entire cost of supplying the light for the whole district. A careful canvass of the district had showed that there were now in use 241 engines of less than five-horse power. These engines in all were of 566½ horse power. There were in the district also 483 hoisting apparatuses worked by hand, and 106 such apparatuses worked by horses. There were also 850 hand-power machines that might be worked by an electric motor.

The Inexhaustible Showman.

New York Letter to Courier-Journal.

Perhaps after all the greatest harbinger of spring is that particularly knowing old bird, P. T. Barnum. He knows when the worms come out of the ground. Very few robins have a sounder instinct than this Connecticut bird of prey. And how splendidly is he endowed with human nature. He seems to believe that the unthinking portion of the public were invented for his special delectation and profit. He is very fond of this lot and takes them into his confidence, and knowing that they will be glad and hurrah over his good fortune he publishes his receipts for the past week at the Garden—total $44,263 15; the receipts of Saturday being nearly $10,000. He says (following the above statement with an apology for a wet week) that "the metropolis is crazed with delight," presumably over the odd fifteen cents. And he begs and implores, does Phineas T., the public not to buy of speculators, those wicked creatures who have conspired to take the morality off of the show. He would force these poor devils of only one talent to bury that article in a napkin. What the views of this party are in reference to another and a better world he has not yet made public, but he doubtless expects to go up in one of his own band chariots and in an apotheosis exhibit himself for the last time as the "only greatest show." How many "last quarters" of poor people this old party has gathered in during his ever-recurring mission to plunder the whole continent will never be known until the last trump shall sound.

Henry Clay's Heel Marks.

From the Lexington Transcript.

As old citizens of Lexington know, the Sage of Ashland for a long time occupied the brick law office on Short street, next to the alley, now occupied by L. P. Tarleton, Esq. In front of the office are several locust trees. The one at the corner is decaying rapidly, and the brick pavement near its roots is sunken below the general level. Under this tree Mr. Clay was in the habit of sitting always with his feet elevated and his heels resting against the tree about four feet above the ground. Few men could sit in an ordinary chair and reach so high on a tree, but Mr. Clay had long legs, as well as a long head. So constantly was he in the habit of sitting in this position that the pavement was sunken, and his heels gouged a deep hole in the bark and outer wood. The spot had since decayed some, in consequence of the abrasion from Mr. Clay's boot heel. Who can tell what thoughts passed through the mind of the Great Commoner when thus sitting and ruminating? Perhaps in front of that modest office, with his heels elevated, he formed part of his great plans, and forged some of the thunderbolts that shook the American continent. It was in this same office, too, that Mr. Clay was sitting when the news was brought to him of James K. Polk's nomination, and he exclaimed, "I am beaten!"

The Little Brigadier.

From a Washington Letter.

I do not know any severer punishment than to be compelled to go day after day to the United States Senate and sit through all of its sessions. The person who is condemned to such a life would become an idiot in a short time. Since the interest has died out in Mabone, and all has been said that could be said about his pantaloons being pleated to the waistband, so as to give him additional fullness, and the skirt of his coat gathered like a tunic, the little man has ceased to be a lion, and no one cares to have him pointed out. Republicans have taken the high moral ground that they are only battling for the constitutional right of the majority ruling. It is conceded that Mahone and his little vote would be small matters in ordinary affairs, but at present both are as valuable and count for as much as the 300-pound vote of David Davis or that of the majestic Arthur. The Democrats are fighting, too for a constitutional right. They learned their lesson from their opponents, who during the past two years proved the power possessed by the minority. One really has to rub his eyes before he can be convinced that he sees aright when he looks in upon the Senate and sees Dawes and Hoar hugging a little Confederate Brigadier, and exalting him above his fellows.

A Social Earthquake.

Cleveland (O.) Special to Chicago Tribune.

A small sized earthquake has just visited the fashionable circles of this city. Jessie Kimball, daughter of Sarah M. Kimball, a very wealthy widow residing on Euclid avenue in this city, was married in Detroit on Saturday last to Will H. Hayes, a young society man, under very peculiar circumstances. Mrs. Hayes will be 18 years of age on Saturday next, and on that day will come into possession of $500,000 left her by her father, with a prospect of largely increased wealth at her mother's death. The mother is in Europe, and Jessie has been keeping house with only servants for companions. Some days ago Jessie went to Detroit to visit friends, and young Hayes followed, when the wedding quietly took place. The news has just leaked out among the friends of the families, and naturally creates quite a sensation in society. The young husband, who, like his bride, is a minor, is of good family, and the whole affair is looked upon as a bit of childish romance.

"Giving Himself Away."

Charlotte, N.C., April 12. Dispatch to Boston Herald.

One of the most remarkable deeds of mortgage probably ever made was put upon record in the register's office here to-day. According to the terms of this mortgage, Charles Dideuover, an intelligent but impecunious person, conveys himself and all right and title to himself to another, to have and to hold forever, to secure a debt he owes to mortgagee. The deed was duly witnessed, signed and sealed. Dideuover is a married man, and, therefore, under the laws of this State, before a man can convey any real estate his wife has to give her signature thereto, acknowledged before a notary public or magistrate. Although it is doubtful whether the object in this case has the character of property, Dideuover's wife waived all of her right, title and claims to him in favor of the mortgagee, and signed the deed of conveyance and acknowledged the same with all due form before a magistrate.

American Girls.

Paris Telegram, March 29.

American prime donne appear to be exceptionally popular in Paris just now. Mademoiselle Vanzandt has sung "Mignon" at the Opera Comique more than seventy times. Indeed, she has sung nothing but this one part since she made her debut in Paris, and she is eagerly sought after in the most musical salons of this city. Another American singer, equally well known in London, Miss Emma Thursby, appeared on Sunday at M. Pasdeloup's popular concert, and was cordially welcomed by a crowded house. She chose an air of Mozart's to prove the excellence of her training, and a brilliant tarantelle of Bizet's to display the facility of her execution, and in both she was very warmly applauded, the natural sweetness of her voice gaining the immediate sympathies of the immense audience.

A Grand Cocking Main in the Western Suburbs.

Fifteen Hundred People Witness Several Hundred Battles.

Lively and Exciting Scenes at the Pit—$15,000 Changes Hands.

"I say" said a well-known sport to a POST-DISPATCH reporter Saturday night, "Do you want to see some fun to-morrow,"

"Well, rather," was the answer.

The place was a down town sporting resort, into which the reporter had dropped in the hope of hearing something about a cocking main, which he knew had been arranged for the following day. There was nobody present at the time, save the barkeeper, and he was nodding drowsily in a far-away corner.

"Well," whispered the sport, "you meet me at Bessehl's at 7 o'clock to-morrow morning. There will be lots of fun. A big cock fight will occur to-morrow at the usual rendezvous out on the Rock Road. I never like to give things away, but I'll be d—d if I want to see Joe Lucas and fellows like that do as they like, when us poor devils have to hide in holes almost or will be pulled. Show this thing up, and the people will see just how sharp the 'Copper's' are. Why every body knows about this fight but the police. There will be 1,000 people there to-morrow and I'll bet a 'fiver' that no 'nabber' will be among them." The reporter was satisfied. He had obtained a trusty guide to the rendezvous, and accordingly he was on hand yesterday morning, and was soon on his way to the pit. The place selected was beyond Rinkel's, on the St. Charles Rock Road, a few rods beyond the city limits. Anybody who walked or rode yesterday morning in the western suburbs must have noticed the number of sports and short-haired men who were rushing westward. Most of them were in light wagons, though a number were on foot. Most of the vehicles contained suspicious looking boys and bundles which were carefully attended to. These were the chickens, and from the number on the ground each wagon must have brought at least half a dozen. Arrived at the pit, nearly 1,000 people were found waiting the arrival of somebody. They were busily engaged. The bags previously mentioned were opened and the birds were being sparred, prepared and exercised. Each handler was surrounded by a group, who took in the fine points of each chicken, and wagers were finally laid. The majority of the crowd were anxious that the fight should begin, and the question "Where is Joe?" and "what the d——l keeps Joe?" was frequently asked, and at last Joe Lucas was seen driving furiously up the road and was soon on the ground. The crowd by this time had swelled to nearly fifteen hundred, and another hundred birds had come in. Among the well-known sporting men the reporter noticed Ed. and George Grassmuck, Larry J. O'Neill, Jack Curran, Jack and Dan Prendy, Ed. Reilly, Billy Noble, Mike McQuade, Jim Menown, Ed. Slattery, Jack Lawler, Miley and Mike McDonough, Jack Cody, Roger Woods, Tony Foster, Bill Gardenbolt, Jule Monday and Jack Snyder. Delegations were also on hand from Buttermilk Prairie, College Hill, East St. Louis, Carondelet and other cock fighting centers, and each crowd had its own birds and its own money in abundance. Joe Lucas was elected master of ceremonies, and while he was adding his coat and hat he ordered the "music to begin" right away. The first contest was between John Lawler's cock and a bird owned and handled by Jule Monday. Betting was very lively, odds of $10 to $9 being finally offered on Lawler's bird. The battle was devoid of interest, Monday's chicken being killed at the first fly. The next twenty contests were also very same, none of them lasting more than three minutes and the vanquished bird being killed with one stroke in each instance.

The twenty-first engagement was much more interesting. The birds pitted were Larry O'Neill's famous "Spetz," from Buttermilk Prairie, and McDonough's "Hero of a Hundred Battles." Betting was lively. O'Neill's cock was the favorite; but a great many people arriving then, Joe Lucas thought the "Hero" good enough to stand by and nearly $1,000 depended upon the issue of the conflict. The birds were both game to the last, but the Hero was the weaker. At the first fly he was gaffed in the side, but after a moment he was all right again and responded nobly to his trainer's call. After several flys the birds were separated, but were soon set down again, "Spitz" being fresh and anxious, the "Hero" blown and tired. At the next fly O'Neill's bird drove his "spur" through the "Hero's" head and the latter fell dead in the saw dust.

Gardenbolt's and Woods' birds, of the best strain in the city, were next set down. At the first fly Woods' bird had his leg broken. The audience at once became clamorous. "Take 'em up," "separate 'em," "let 'em fight," and other exclamations were heard. Lucas called for quiet, and declared that the fight should continue. Meanwhile the game birds were struggling for the mastery. The maimed cock was thrown on his side, and being unable to rise he was almost torn to pieces by his opponent who stood over him. It was a most beastly sight, and even old cock fanciers who were present expressed their digust in the strongest terms. After a long series of interesting turns, a bird belonging to Mc-Sweney was pitted against a cock out of Mike McQuake's famous "White Tail." McQuade's rooster turned tail and attempted to get away, but was pursued by his rival, who killed him with a single blow. Matt Ryan and Ed. Reilly's birds had a turn, Ryan's bird proving victorious. The remainder of the contests, nearly three hundred in number, were simply a repetition of the preceding. The main began at 9 a. m. and lasted until 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Time was called at the latter hour only because the birds had given out. Out of the 500 birds brought out in the morning, 400 were lying dead around the pit, and the remaining were so tired and disabled as to be unfit for further service. At the beginning of the last fight an exciting episode occurred. Jack Lawler had just heeled a bird and was taking him into the pit, when Curran claimed that the cock belonged to himself and had been stolen from his place on Second street. Lawler flatly told Curran that he was a liar, and stopping the bird, both men prepared for action. The crowd began to get excited and a free fight was about to begin, when the master of ceremonies succeeded by much talk and some vigorous "bossing" in putting an end to the difficulty. "What in the d——l do you fellows mean?" shouted Lucas, "you will give the whole game away if you go on like this." Peace was restored and the fight went on. Yesterday's main was the largest that has been fought in this city for years. All the followers of the sport were on hand, and no such gathering has been seen since the police raided the old pit on Grand avenue near the base ball park.

The amount of money which changed hands was nearly $15,000, a larger sum than has been lost here in cock fighting since the war. The sports adjourned with the understanding that they will meet at the same place next Sunday, when another big main will be fought. In fact, the place has been visited every Sunday for the past month, and is considered the safest rendezvous in the State. The fights are talked about for a week previous, but the police never pay any attention. There was some comment made among the "boys" yesterday about the absence of several prominent patrons of the sport. "I say," said one handler to another, before the main began, "will Bill Ewing be ought to-day?" "Well, I should rather remark not," was the answer.

ANOTHER FIGHT.

Seventy-five cockfighters assembled at the pit in "Buttermilk Prairie" yesterday morning and several lively bouts were fought. The crowd finally grew so large that it was feared the mounted police might get wind of the thing, and adjournment was had to the big fight described above. Twenty cocks were killed and $300 changed hands in this morning's exercise.

A Bewitched Violin.

From the Cincinnati Saturday Night.

Mr. Remenyi had a curious experience on the stage of the Opera House in Cincinnati the other evening. He relates it in this note to the public: "Last evening at my concert at Pike's Opera House an accident happened to me for the first time in my life. As I began the Andante of the Mendelssohn Concerto, I felt that my first string twisted. Of course I could not go on. I left the stage, and put another string on my violin. Scarcely did I recommence before the E string broke again; this second unprecedented accident, of course, excited me in the highest degree, and in my anxiety to do justice to the public I again left the stage to put on another string, and in my nervous excitement I broke the bridge of my violin; having no second instrument at hand, I was oblige to request Mr. Beale to announce to the public that it was impossible for me to continue the concert. Of course my violin is again in order, and I hope in Providence that this evening, at my concert, no accident whatever will occur, the accident last night being the first that has ever happened to me."

Emigrants Pouring In.

From a New York Letter, April 16.

Last week 9,230 emigrants arrived at Castle Garden, being an increase of 2,000 over the same time last year. This shows what may be expected the coming season. The facilities for the reception and transportation of this class are so complete that but little delay occurs between arrival and departure. Castle Garden can accommodate 10,000 in that plain but wholesome manner provided for emigrants. The latter are supplied with food at a low price, and can also have their money correctly changed. Railway facilities are afforded and interpreters are employed, and the result is that 2,000 emigrants can be sent West daily. Few indeed, remain here more than two days unless they intend to make this city their home. The value of this emigration is beyond all estimate. America is becoming enriched with the best blood of Europe, and the wealth of muscle, health, and the purpose of industry renders these arrivals a vast and enduring national benefit.

A SEANCE SWINDLE.

The Bare-Faced Fraud at Library Hall Last Evening.

How Colville and French Played It on the People of St. Louis.

The Tricks as Witnessed by a Post-Dispatch Reporter in Concealment.

Elbowing his way through the throng of excited people who filled the halls and stairways of the Mercantile Library last night previous to the commencement of the Colville seance, a POST-DISPATCH reporter slipped unnoticed to the side of the stage, and mounting to the level of the cornice of the great organ found a position above the flies which gave an opportunity to see what was behind as well as before the scenes, and which likewise commanded a good view of the audience.

The circulars which were scattered broadcast over the city had

FURNISHED MUCH AND ASKED LITTLE.

A piano was to be lifted from the stage and to be played while suspended in the air by spirit power. Flowers were to be produced and whole forms of the disembodied were to be materialized in plain view of the spectators. Musical instruments were to float in the air, giving forth a sweet concord of sounds under spirit influence. Sealed messages were to be read and conveyed through mediumistic power. All these and many other marvellous manifestations were promised and the circular concluded with:

"A collection will be taken at the entrance to defray expenses. All are invited."

If there is anything St. Louis delights to honor with a crowd it is A FREE SHOW.

Under the impression that this could be so classed four or five thousand people climbed the stairways. When they found a man in the box office selling tickets at fifty cents a piece, and learned that the collection at the door consisted in taking up these pasteboards prior to admission, nine-tenths of the people turned about and went away. A few of the more turbulent remained long enough to smash in the window of the ticket office and to drive out the money changer. In the morning of Sunday the showmen, conscious of the fraud they were about to perpetrate, called on the police for a guard. About 7 o'clock a telephone message was sent from Alexander's drug store to the Four Courts that the crowd was

DEMOLISHING FURNITURE.

Sergeant Campbell gathered up all the patrolmen he could reach and taking possession of the place prevented any further damage. Those who submitted to the fifty cents imposition intimated a great lack of faith in the intentions of Colville and his assistants, so much indeed that Chief Chapman quietly placed detectives at every exit of the hall and one or two men to watch the mediums with instructions to arrest them if they tried to get out without giving the promised entertainment.

Of the turbulent proceedings which characterized the show on the part of the eleven hundred people who deposited their half dollars at the door and went in to be swindled, the morning papers gave a fair description. Colville was interrupted at every sentence by cries of "Fraud!" and about once in a quarter of an hour the whole crowd would rise as one person, rush forward to the platform demanding money back. Three woman took the stage and refused to budge until their silver was returned. In spite of the showman's entreaties they didn't go until the half dollars gladdened their palms, while the crowd, chiefly men, yelled with delight. At one time a rush was made for the door and money demanded. The doorkeeper, however, stood firm, and the police, while realizing that the whole thing was a grand fraud, saved him from bodily harm.

From his perch near the ceiling the POST-DISPATCH investigator looked down on the most ever perpetrated on a St. Louis platform. While Colvile was doing the talking in front his assistant (French) moved around behind the flies in an agile manner. There was a table close against one wing. The medium in front showed a clean slate and promised to get writing upon it. Then he laid it down on this table, and instantly French replaced it with another exactly like it, upon which he had just written something. Colville, picking up slate No. 2, placed it on a chair, went through contortions and invoked the spirits. Then he turned the state over and there was French's scrawl upon the back which the reporter had seen done behind the flies.

Then there was the book trick. Colville walked out among the audience showing an ordinary book of 150 pages on spiritualism. He allowed various persons to run over the pages. Then he returned to the stage and lying the book on the table engaged the attention of the crowd a moment while French removed the book and put in its place another prepared for the trick. This act which was could not be seen by the audience, as French kept close to the fly and gave the prepared book a little shove sending it out in the place the other had occupied. Turning, Colville picked up to the book, and walking down to the front row of the seats gave it to one of the spectators. He told the man next to the one holding the book to thrust his knife blade between the leaves and had it opened at that exact place, telling the one holding it to grasp both sides firmly. The book in this position Colville, proceeded to repeat what was on the page, pretending that the words were prompted through his mediumistic powers. As soon as he had reached the bottom of the page he skipped down, grasped the book and returned to the stage nimbly before the astonished holder had time to see that the work was prepared for just such a trick, with the same reading matter on every page. The crowd seemed to think that this was quite a trick, and gradually became interested and gradually sat down. French's dexterity in changing the dummy to the genuine volume and Colville's agility in getting back the dummy before the holder saw that all the pages were alike, alone prevented the imposition from being seen through.

The manner in which Colville and French worked the slate and book tricks illustrates the whole show. There was not even a scientific delusion. When the book reading had been finished the well know title investigator, came forward, and holding up a volume said he would give the medium $5 to read a page at random from that. This was promptly declined, but Colville called Mr. Williams on the stage and proceeded to make a fool of the old gentleman by the most outrageous of all frauds.

He gave Mr. Williams a quire of paper and told him to write the name of somebody who had departed this life, and he would try to get a message from the spirit land. While Mr. Williams wrote Colville went down in the crowd and borrowed two or three silver dollars. Mr. Williams wrote the name, tore off the scrap of paper from the quire, and when Colville returned with his silver dollars he told Mr. Williams to put the name in his pocket while he took the quire of paper and threw it on the side table in a careless way. Colville put his silver dollars on a slate under a glass, all but one, which he "palmed" in the ordinary way. He told Mr. Williams to hold the glass firm over the dollars and he would see one of them go through the bottom of the slate. Colville gave the slate a shake, dropped the dollar from his palm to the floor and the trick was done. Then he took Mr. Williams over to the side of the stage and seated him carefully with his back to the table on which the quire of paper still lay. Now was French's time to approach behind the fly and reach out for the paper. Unfortunately for this plan, Mr. Williams turned sideways and on the note paper. The tricksters were almost in despair. Colville, however, is quick witted and he announced that with the aid of his assistant, French, he proposed to make a large table rise from the floor, about which would be seated several ladies. He called for volunteers and half a dozen old women climbed on the platform. French came out from behind the scenes, but not, however, till the POST-DISPATCH investigator had seen him slip a mechanical contrivance in the form of a bar and clasp, reaching from the elbow to his waistband, up his sleeve. While French arranged the table and chairs Colville went out, and in full view of the reporter went through the same operation, fixing his sleeves with the bar attached to elbow and wrist. Colville got back as French was arranging the women about the table. He took his seat at one end and French sat at the other. The women were at the sides. All placed their hands palms down on the table and in full view of the man aloft. French and Colville shoved the

in their sleeves under the table. At French's right sat a sharp little woman who watched him closely; the others were stout and dull-looking matrons. French looked imploringly at Colville; exposure was imminent. Colville jumped up, and taking the little woman by the arm, called out to the audience that she was "not in condition for the test," and he must have another subject. There was another volunteer, and then Colville and French again shoved under the ends of the clasps in their sleeves, pressed hard toward each other, raised up the table by physical force, swung it round two or three times and dropped it. One after the other the two mediums slipped behind the scenes and relieved their coat sleeves, while the old women, a good deal mystified, returned to their seats. Another ineffectual attempt was made to get hold of the quire of paper on which Mr. William's elbow was resting but it was unsuccessful. It began to look as if this trick would fail. Colville, however, after relieving his coat sleeves, came out and boldly announced that he was going to get some remarkable manifestations from which he trundled into the middle of the platform. It was made of rods and dark curtains with a large hole in the top through which the reporter looked down with a great deal of satisfaction. While this was being arranged Colville made a pretext of clearing off the little side table just behind Mr. Williams, and as he did so he slipped the quire of paper in between several other articles and carried it behind the flies. French took immediate possession of it and going to a light held it up carefully between him and the flame. A grin of satisfaction could be seen as he deciphered the name Mr. Williams had written. the prepared surface having taken the impression from the pencil's print through several sheets.

Colville went through the farce of having a strong post bolted down to the floor inside the cabinet; through this a bolt was passed prepared for the occasion, after a genuine bolt had been handed about in the hall. The bolt was placed firmly in position and French was made seemingly fast to it by tying, sewing and sealing wax.

A tambourine containing the usual trumpet, bells and whistle was placed inside and the curtain lowered. From the reporter's position French could be seen to give his wrists a deft turn and then instantaneously both hands were free from the post. His legs were tied to the post but that made no difference. He leaned over, grasped one thing after another, played on it a moment and tossed it through the hole at the top which afforded the reporter his inside view, then settling himself back in his seat French resumed his position as suddenly as he had left it, and the curtain was raised showing him apparently bound as at first. Mr. Williams came forward and with great gravity said the sewing and the sealing wax had not been disturbed. The curtain was lowered and Colville announced that there would be manifestations of hands. French was ready before the words were out of Colville's mouth and rising from his seat thrust his hands through the aperture at the top. Colville said he would pass in a slate and perhaps get a message from the spirit land. He passed in the slate which Mr. Williams had previously rubbed over carefully, and French took it and with a bit of chalk wrote upon it. Then he passed it out—Colville calling on Mr. Williams to receive it. The old gentleman did so, and looking at it was immediately overcome with emotion. He had foolishly written on the piece of paper, on the quire given him by Colville, who died a few weeks ago, Mrs. Annie Williams. The scamp who had deciphered it on the prepared paper behind the scenes had written on the slate a message to the effect that the writer was very happy in the present state and had signed it "Annie Williams." The old gentleman had previously confided to Albert Todd his intentions to write the name if he got an opportunity, and he called out excitedly for that gentleman. Mr. Todd had, however, left the room and so failed to help out his old friend in making a complete fool of himself. Mr. Williams, in a choking voice, explained the remarkable manifestation, and with tears in his eyes left the stage. French sat with a broad grin on his face in the cabinet, as he turned his face upwards almost catching sight of the reporter who dodged back behind the organ pipes at the risk of breaking his neck. Colville stepped forward and said unblushingly that it was indeed a most remarkable manifestation.

THE NAME OF HIS WIFE,

After this the crowd kept quiet and the performance was hussied through. After a few more cabinet tricks French came out and while he was taking up the post and pushing back the cabinet Colville went behind the scenes and adjusted the clamp on his left arm. French announced that Colville was going to lift a table instead of a piano. Colville came out and took his seat back of a small stand. He put his hands palms downward on the top and shoving the end of the bar underneath raised the table. The act was very bunglingly done. The clamp slipped at one time and seemed as if it would come into full view of the audience. Colville's face reddened and as quick as he could he dropped the table, declared the seance over and skipped behind the scenes. As the crowd, half puzzled and half angry, not fully understanding the deceptions, dispersed, the POST-DISPATCH man clambered down, coming face to face with one of the gang. The fellow looked sharply, but one of Chief Chapman's men was with him. A familiar greeting between the detective and the reporter disarmed the medium's suspicion. Indeed the members of the troupe were too glad to have the seance over and get away with the bundle to be over particular in their observations.

Dyer's Claim Denied.

Judge Woerner to-day denied the claim of D. C. Dyer for legal services rendered in the administration of A. F. Weidel's estate. In this case there was no proof of death, and the property ultimately came into the hands of the Public Administrator. The Probate Court holds that the status of Weidel at the time that the services for which payment is sought was that of a living person and as there was no proof of death there could be no administration.

THE MAYOR'S MIND.

Mr. Ewing Defines an Excellent Policy,

And Takes His Stand on a Civil Service Platform.

He Has No Appointments to Make and No Official Secrets to Keep.

When Mayor Ewin reached the City Hall this morning he called a brief consultation with the secretaries, Espenschied and Schuette. As the result of it, the gentlemen who had gone through an ordeal with Mr. Overstolz similar to that Mr. Ewing has experienced the past week overhauled the contents of their closets and produced a big tin sign with gilt letters on black ground. It is now firmly nailed over the door to the inner office at such an angle as to catch the eyes of every person who comes in. This is the reading of it:

NOTICE: All applications for office must be made in writing, and the recommendation of the applicant must accompany the same.

To a POST-DISPATCH reporter who dropped in to assist in keeping the new executive occupied, Mr. Ewing said good naturedly: "This is Monday, and I'm trying to put a new rule in force. Up to this time I've let them all at me at all hours and as fast as they wanted to come. After this I shall try to have regular hours."

"You've found it a good deal of a strain?"

"Oh, I don't mind that (with a laugh) as far as I'm concerned. I am unable to give that time and attention to the details of the city government that I want to. It isn't the purpose to shut anybody out, but hereafter from 10 to 12 the doors will be open to all. The afternoons I need for legitimate city business. I make the rule not for my own protection, but for the good of the administration."

At this juncture Assistant Secretary Schuette came in with a formidable looking envelope addressed "to the Honorable Mayor of the City of St. Louis." Mr. Ewing opened, glanced through it, and then placed it in a drawer.

"Shall I say anything to the gentleman?" asked the secretary.

"Yes," was the reply. "Tell him it shall be given consideration."

The manner and tone of the Mayor said plainer than words, "would that I could give this applicant and every other just what is asked for."

"Much pressure from office seekers?" queried the reporter.

The Mayor smiled. A responsive chord had been struck. "Yes, I think there are applications for every portion under the city government."

After a moment's reflection Mr. Ewing added deliberately: "I wish you would say as coming from me that there are no offices to be filled. There are no appointments to make now. Two years hence the terms of the appointive officers expire. There will be no removals on political grounds. There will be no changes except for cause."

Here Mr. Schuette broke in on the interview with another application to be filed.

The reporter inquired about Sewer Commissioner Moore's resignation, suggesting there was a vacancy.

"Mr. Moore's resignation has been filed," the Mayor said, "but no action whatever has been taken as yet in regard to it. There has been no acceptance thus far. The position, I think, requires a man of engineering knowledge and ability. It is a matter, however, to which I havn't given any attention as yet."

"There is a vacancy in the First District Police Court clerkship, isn't there? Thomas, it is said, is going to be chief deputy in the new City Marshal's office."

"I havn't received any resignation as yet."

"Will your message to the Assembly tomorrow be a lengthy one?"

"No, the regular annual message comes later, about the middle of May. I shall simply call the attention of the Assembly at this session to some matters rather of routine character needing immediate attention."

"There won't be anything of special interest to the public just now?"

"No, I think not."

"These subjects of street reconstruction and dust laying that St. Louisans are so much interested in—shall you have something to say about them in May?"

"Probably. I had occasion in the House of Delegates to give them some attention, you know. It is pretty hard to submit propositions to please everybody. Every plan broached so far has met with opposition so determined as to defeat it, either by property holders or interested corporations. I havn't been able to give the subjects as much attention as I propose to, but I shall probably incorporate some recommendations in the regular annual message."

In reply to a question about his policy the Mayor laughed and said: "Well, there won't be anything covered up in my administration. I don't believe in executive sessions where such can possibly be avoided. The people shall know all about my official acts. Newspaper men will find my door open, and will get whatever news there is to be had. That is my idea of conducting public affairs."

Mayor Ewing to-day approved and forwarded to Jefferson City the bond of Collector Hudson. That official, it may not be generally known, gives four bonds, or perhaps more accurately speaking three. One is to the city, which the Mayor and Council approve. Another is to the School Board, with which the city has nothing to do. A third is to the State. This last is in duplicate form, one copy being kept with the City Register, and the other sent to the State Auditor.

Edward Patterson, of Johnsonville, Jewell county, Kansas, writes to the Mayor asking for information of Josephine Annette Murreson. She was clerking in a St. Louis store two years ago, and it is of great importance to her, the Kansas correspondent says, that he should learn her whereabouts.

A Widow's Victory.

Judge Thayer decided to-day in favor of the widow in the suit of the Broadway Bank assignee against Margaret, the widow of John F. Tolle. The deceased had executed a note for $3,500, payable to the order of Nicholas Schaeffer and endorsed by him, The note was protested and the account was allowed against the estate after the death of Tolle. In March, 1879, the Broadway Bank demanded of Schaeffer additional security for the note, and Schaeffer procured a note from the widow which he delivered to the bank as security for the antecedent indebtedness of the husband. This note was protested but Mrs. Tolle went to her attorney, Wm. B. Thompson, with the money to pay the note which she had given if the law sustained the position of the bank in claiming it. Mr. Thompson took the ground that there could be no recovery as there was "no consideration." Judge Thayer sustained this view in his decision to-day.

JUMPED THE TRACK.

A Narrow Escape from a Serious Accident in the Tunnel.

An accident, which might have resulted in a serious loss of life but for the presence of mind of the men in charge of the train, occurred in the tunnel this morning. Shortly after 8 o'clock the St. Louis, Wabash and Pacific train from the East, composed of a mail, a baggage, two passenger coaches and a sleeper, drawn by tunnel engine No. 2, entered the tunnel from the Main street depot, going at the usual rate of speed for trains going through. The engine had just rounded the corner under Eighth and St Cearles streets when it suddenly jumped the track, taking the baggage and mail cars with it. Near Locust street it jumped completely across the rail and turned over on its side. The fireman was thrown from the cab but sustained no injury more than a slight bruise to one of his feet. The engineer closed the throttle valve and the cars stopped within a few feet. A number of ladies and gentlemen were in the sleeper and about twenty gentlemen in the smoking car. At the first jar the passengers were on their feet, supposing that the train had collided with another coming in the opposite direction. A rush was made for the doors and the cars were filled in a few minutes with the stifling coke smoke. Conductor Burch at once ascertained the extent of the accident and started for Union Depot, returning in about half an hour with a coach in which the passengers, who were badly scared, were taken out. The heat and smoke made the sojourn in the tunnel anything but pleasant for the passengers. The accident was due to the sagging of the track a few feet west of the curve. The trains going east were delayed until arrangements would be made to run them through on another track.

A RESTIVE RECEIVER.

Bids to be Taken for the Unincumbered Northern Packet Company.

The Keokuk Northern Packet muddle brought all the parties in interest to Judge Lindley's Court this morning expecting a decision as to some disposition of the property in the hands of the receiver. The fine weather opening up river travel, much dissatisfaction is expressed that the property of the company should remain tied up, and the receiver, restive at this stagnant condition of affairs, at a time when good money could be earned in the packet service, moved the Court to sell out the entire property. He found that he could not run the boats available for business because no guarantee could be furnished that they would ply the waters undisturbed by hostile creditors. The Court this morning granted an order for the sale of all the property not covered by the mortgage, the proceeds to be applied to the payment of expenses. The receiver is authorized to receive bids, subject to the approval of the Court, for the purchase of the following unincumbered property: Steamer Minnesota, lying at Alton Slough; barges D. Hunkins, Prescott, Hastings, Dick, Ida, South and Duncan; the company's boat-yard at St. Louis; warehouses at Falmouth, Louisiana, Hannibal, LaGrange, Gregory's Landing and Canton, Mo. The question of selling the entire property will be determined in the future.

Hanna's Services to McKee.

Judge Woerner to-day in the Probate Court decided the claim of Judge B. W. Hanna, of Indianapolis, upon the McKee estate, for legal services rendered at the whisky trials. The claim was $2,500, and hotel expenses, $134. Judge Woerner finds that his services were rendered with the knowledge of William McKee, but the prima facie case is rebutted by evidence showing that he come here to assist Mr. Voorhees. He was then requested by Mr. McKee to remain and he went to Indianapolis to hunt up evidence for the McKee defense, The Court under the circumstances allows the claim in the sum of $1,000 to be placed in the sixth class.

PER STEAMER LABRADOR, Mermod, Jaccard, & Co., Fourth and Locust, have received an immense invoice of DIAMONDS, being part of the late purchases of their Mr. C. F. Mathey in Paris.

The Crazy Horse Thief.

Hay, the farmer from near McLeansboro, has come over after his insane son who developed a mania for horse stealing in the northern part of St. Louis county. The old gentleman says that it was known the young man was not in his mind when he was put on the train at Sherman, Texas, but it was not supposed that his malady would take such a violent turn. As a precaution he wired the police here to look after the lunatic if he did lose his control completely. But for this message going Hay might have been in Clayton jail for weeks. There was a great deal of feeling in the county over his dare-devil exploits and he had two or three narrow escapes from being perforated with buckshot.

A Student Dead.

Geo. W. Graham, a student at the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, was attacked with cerebro-spinal meningitis a couple of days ago.

He continued to suffer terribly until yesterday, when he died. Deceased lived at Danville, Milan county, Texas. His body now lies at the college, and the interment will take place in this city, unless his friends should request otherwise. He had been a student at the college nearly one year.

Second District Police Court.

This morning there were 61 cases up before Judge Denison of the Second District Police Court for a hearing. Among them 18 were for disturbing the peace, 4 charged with being frequenters of disreputable houses and 7 women of disreputable character. Thirteen meatshop cases and 7 lottery cases were laid over until to-morrow. The total fines assessed amounted to $160. All cases were light and the fines were not heavy.

A TRAP FOR A HUSBAND.

How Mrs. Dunlevy Waited for Her Spouse at 710 N. Eleventh,

And How, Not Finding Him, She Assaulted and Battered His Delilah.

A gorgeously dressed lady accompanied by a little boy of ten stepped into the grocery on the corner of Eleventh and Christy avenue on Wednesday evening last and asked where a girl named "Lotta" or "Lottie" could be found. They were unable at the grocery to give the desired information, as there are in the neighborhood several females of kind and amiable disposition and of corresponding virtue who rejoice in that euphonious designation. The lady did not know the last name of her quarry, but after some questioning it became evident that she meant very serious business. At last she produced a photograph from her pocket of a young and rather foreign looking woman with flaxen hair banged in the kitchen clip upon her forehead and a reckless cyprian sort of an air about her generally.

"This is the woman," said the lady.

A lot of volunteers testified at once that they had seen the subject of the picture often, and they thought that she hung out at 712 North Eleventh street, a house run by the notorious Madam Hastings. To Madam Hastings accordingly the lady repaired. She had been already recognized by some of the crowd as Mrs. A. C. Dunlevy, the wife of a prominent iron merchant on the levee. At this place she made inquiries again, and became satisfied that Lotta abode next door—No. 710—and was not a boarder but a rentier. She called on Lotta at once and said that she had made an appointment to meet a gentleman friend, and she wished to rent a room from her for a few hours. Lotta answered that she was not keeping that kind of a house, but that she had a friend who could accommodate her, and threw a shawl over her head to go out with her to the place. As soon as she stepped out into the street she noticed the little boy who was with Mrs. Dunlevy and asked her what he was doing. "Oh," she replied, "this is a district telegraph boy whom I shall send to my friend when I get the room." She then entreated Lotta so earnestly to be permitted to stay at her house that the girl suspected something wrong, and turning suddenly away ran into her room and locked herself in. Mrs. D. then assured herself that her husband had been visiting Lotta by a great many questions, and proceeded to lay in wait for him. With her little son by her side she loitered about that imposing locality, and at last caught sight once more of Miss Lotta, whom she at once chased into the alley between Tenth and Eleventh and Christy and Morgan, when she caught up with her. The cyprian was at once knocked down and beaten about her head before she had time to defend herself; then she took a hand in the proceedings and tore Mrs. Dunlevy's sealskin cloak and smashed her gold watch. The girl was thoroughly frightened, however, and she screamed loudly for the police. In the mean time the negroes who live in the alley swarmed out by hundreds, and the alley was perfectly black with people. So much excitement has not been seen in the classic shades of Green street since 1872. The little fellow went manfully at work to help his mother, and doubled his tiny little fists to take part in the affray. At last believing that the demi-mondaine had been sufficiently punished, Mrs. Dunlevy retired victorious from the field. Her husband did not return home that night, however, and she was back again on the scene of the last night's struggle on Thursday morning. He did not appear, and after keeping up her lonely visit until it was evident that the gentleman was not about, Mrs. D. retired and has not since been seen by any of the people there.

As it certainly is an unusual thing for a lady to tackle a denizen of that street at a late hour of the night in this fashion without a sensational story lying beneath it all, a reporter called upon Miss Lotta Anderson early this morning and asked her what the row was about. Lotta is not a prepossessing girl in the face, though she has a fine figure. She is a Swede and looks to be muscular enough to take care of herself. Her story is that Mrs. Dunlevy was trying to trap her husband, who, she admitted, was one of her many friends. She did not know that his name was Dunlevy, however, until after this open escloudre on Wednesday night, when she learned that it was. She said that some time ago she gave him one of her photographs and she supposes his wife found it in his pockets. She corroborated all of the details of the scrapping match, as given above, and she stated that she had instituted suit against Mrs. Dunlevy in Justice Young's Court upon a peace warrant. Just as the reporter was leaving she told him he had better call her Lotta Finley in the paper. It was one of her names, she said, and she did not want her family to know the kind of a scrape she had been drawn into.

It will be remembered that just a year ago Mrs. Dunlevy figured in the papers for a somewhat similar cause. She was driving down Fourth street at a very rapid rate in violation of the city ordinance, and Officer Grady, then stationed at Fourth and Olive streets, stopped the horse and buggy. She immediately rose up in the vehicle and struck him several times very severely with the buggy whip, for which she was fined in the Police Court. Mrs. Dunlevy is a large, majestic looking woman, and is evidently possessed of great force of character. Her attempt to trap her husband at Lotta's place was evidently founded on the plot of Shakspeare's comedy, "All's Well that Ends Well," only this case does not end well for any of the parties concerned.

THE show-window displays of ARTISTIC goods and DIAMONDS, mounted and unset, made during the past week, have attracted ADMIRING thousands to the great jewelry house of Mermod, Jaccard & Co., Fourth and Locust.

THE REGULAR PRESBYTERIANS.

Semi-Annual Meeting of the St. Louis Presbytery To-Morrow Night.

The Presbytery of St. Louis will hold its semi-annual meeting in this city this week, beginning to-morrow night. This Presbytery is the regular church in distinction from the Southern Presbyterians. The St. Louis Presbytery embraces St. Louis and St. Charles counties on the north, and extends as far west as the town of Washington, and in the southeast to the Arkansas line. There are fifty-five churches in the Presbytery and forty-two members. The meetings will be held at the Glasgow Avenue Presbyterian Church, of which the Rev. Thomas Marshall is pastor. To-morrow night the present Moderator, Rev. J. R. Warner, of Kirkwood, will preach a sermon, and then the Presbytery will be opened for business, the first item being the election of a new moderator and clerk. On Wednesday and Thursday the Presbytery will have three sessions, at 9 a. m., 2 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. Each church is entitled to one lay delegate in the Presbytery. On Wednesday delegates to the General Assembly, which begins at Buffalo, May 19, will be selected. The ladies of the Glasgow Avenue Church have made arrangements to furnish the Presbytery with a lunch between the morning and afternoon sessions on Wednesday and Thursday.

Court of Criminal Correction.

There was a heavy docket in the Court of Criminal Correction to-day. The charges of assault to kill against Charles Rose and Calvin Emerson were dismissed, as charges of murder have been preferred. The case of John Burke, assault and battery, was continued generally, and Mr. W. R. Anderson, arraigned on a similar accusation, was discharged on the facts elicited at the examination. The case of Jas. Nagel was continued generally, as was also that of J. L. Martin, who was charged with attempting to pass a forged check. In a case of obtaining goods under false pretenses he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to six months in the workhouse. A nolle pros. was entered to the charge of cruelty to animals against Gobe White and Charles H. Martin. The other cases were continued to various dates.

LOOK at the Diamonds in Cooper's window.

The Gordon Murder Trial.

The Gordon murder trial is progressing slowly in the Criminal Court to-day. Ex-Police Sergeant Tom Hayhurst testified that he had a conversation with Gordon on the night of the killing. Gordon told him that he had been playing pool and drinks were coming to him, and that the barkeeper attacked him. He saw the butcher knife on the ice chest and picked it up to defend himself. Other police officers testified, but to no important facts.

NORTH ST. LOUIS LOCALS.

As the river has begun to fall the lumber companies will put men at work on the rafted lumber at the landings to-morrow.

Miss Alice Bersley, 3119 North Eighteenth street, while standing on a chair cleaning a window this morning fell off and injured her shoulder very badly.

This morning Belle Johnson, while locked up in a cell of the Second District Police Court, took a fit and fell down, injuring and cutting herself badly about the face.

There is a costly silk dress at the Fourth District Station waiting an owner, which was found in a hay loft in the western part of the city by Detectives Willow and Walsh.

The Fairmont Church is now being removed from Ninth and Bremen avenue to its new location on the north side of Hyde Park, where a Congregational Church is to be organized.

A fleet of lumber, 1,000,000 feet, will leave La Crosse, Wis., in a few days for the Gruner Brothers' Lumber Company here. The raft is loaded with nearly 1,000,000 laths, and is worth $18,000.

The members of the Box-makers' and Sawyers' Benevolent Union will meet tomorrow evening for the transaction of important business at the hall, corner Seventeenth and Wright streets.

To-morrow evening the members of Golden Crown Lodge, No. 62, Pythian Knights, expect to have an interesting time, as no less than fourteen candidates will be put through the second rank and three lodges from Illinois will attend, and probably Frank Wiley, State Chancellor, from Moberly.

Henry Wilkenite, 17 years old, while playing base ball at the corner of Thirteenth and Anglerodt streets, was struck on the left side of the temple with a ball and badly injured. He was removed to his home, 3414 North Twelfth street, and Dr. Summer was called in, who pronounced the wound not dangerous.

SPECTACLES AND EYE-GLASSES.—Our optical department, in charge of our skilled optician, is giving UNBOUNDED satisfaction. Try it if you need GLASSES. Mermod, Jaccard & Co., Fourth and Locust.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

Patrick Mahoney had Patrick McDonough arraigned before 'Squire Graney this morning on a charge of assault with intent to kill. About three weeks ago Mahoney went into the saloon where McDonough tends bar. A quarrel ensued and Mahoney was struck on the head with a large club. He has been in the hospital since in a very critical condition.

John O'Malley, an habitual drunkard and worthless character in general, failed to convince 'Squire Graney of his ability and willingness to earn an honest livelihood this morning. O'Malley has been arranged in the same Court several times on various charges within the last month. He was assessed $100 and costs, and will be held to work out the fine.

The City Council will hold a meeting this evening and are expected to transact some important business. Many bills and complaints of importance which have been before the old Council for the last two months, but which were postponed till after the election, are expected to receive attention. The old printing bill against the city which has not been paid in full for years will also claim the considerate of the new shining lights.

Maurice F. Tissier, an East St. Louis editor, performed an heroic action yesterday evening. Several small boys were engaged in skiff riding on one of the sloughs, when one of the skiffs capsized, throwing the only occupant, the little son of an aged widow, in the water. Mr. Tissier, who happened along at the time, rushed into the water at the imminent risk of his life, as he is not an expert swimmer and rescued the little child. When they regained the shore the little boy was in an unconscious state and remained so till late last night. Mr. Tissier was also prostrated from the effects of his submersion and the excitement of the moment. A large number of inhabitants serenaded Mr. Tissier at his residence last night. He was confined to his bed, however, and could not appear. The attending physician thinks he will recover in a few days.

AT a meeting of the New York Anthracite Coal Exchange the prices at Buffalo were adjusted for the opening of navigation on the lakes, indicating a firm market throughout the season, with lowest prices in May and June and a steady advance thereafter until December. Mr. J. J. Sylvester represented St. Louis at the meeting.

A BELLE'S PHOTOS.

Malicious Report of Their Sale Denied by the Young Lady.

A rumor has been going the rounds of society for the past week, the gist of which was that a very well-known young lady and a very well known photographer had made an arrangement and that the aforesaid young lady's photographs could be bought at market prices. A paragraph appeared in yesterday's Kansas City Times letting the cat out of the bag. The paragraph stated that a young lady well known by her soubriquet of the "belle of St. Louis" had allowed her pictures to be put on sale. The Times then went on to state that a lady had called at Guerin's establishment on Olive street and had admired a picture of the young lady in question. The saleswoman began to dust it and asked how many of them she wanted. "What!" exclaimed the customer, "do you sell these?" The shopwoman saw that she had made a mistake, hemmed and hawed a little, and then replied, "No-o; not without an order from the young lady."

The matter came to the ears of a POST-DISPATCH reporter several days ago but no mention of it was given; none would be given now if the publication in the Kansas City Times had not made the rumor common property. Of course the lady alluded to is Miss Nellie Hazeltine. Anybody who has passed Guerin's window, on the North side of Olive street, near Seventh, has noticed a large frame filled with Miss Nellie's pictures. In the center is a photograph in what is known as vignette style, an half undraped bust, with pedestal: round this are affixed a half dozen counterfeit presentments of Miss Hazeltine, side and front face pictures some with bonnets and others with bewitching little lace caps that are just too killing. Dame Rumor has it that they are all for sale, and the item mentioned above confirms the statement. A POST-DISPATCH reporter called upon Miss Hazeltine at her residence this afternoon, being pretty sure that the rumor had no foundation and he was asked into the parlor, and while waiting for Miss Hazeltine to come down the reporter noticed that the room was filled with photographs of that young lady.

The belle of St. Louis soon entered. She was clad in an elegant and tasteful dress of black with white lace collar and bangle bracelets, with padlocks. She greeted the newspaper man very pleasantly but her sweet countenance became clouded as soon as she was shown the item in question. She read it through very carefully and then said: "Why this is a shameful perversion of facts. There is no truth whatever in the statements. Just sit down and I will tell you the whole story. When I had the pictures taken, I ordered about a half dozen of each, which I distributed among my relations. Of course I was not rich enough to give copies to all who desired them, so in some few cases I gave orders to a few of my most intimate friends by which they could purchase the pictures."

"You gave orders that none should be sold without an order?"

"I did, and Mr. Guerin has strictly observed the rule. To show you that he has, an intimate friend of mine, Miss Papin, got one of the orders and she afterwards told me her experience with it. The man scanned her closely and then examined the order as he would a check. She declared that she was never so scrutinized in her life."

"Are you sure that none of them have been sold?"

"Indeed I am. Mrs. Guerin told me that an English gentleman called in the other day and admired the pictures greatly. He desired to purchase but she refused. He was much surprised, and asked," 'What, can I not purchase in the same way that I can those of Lady Dudley, Mrs. Langtry or any of the famous beauties?' 'No,' said Mrs. Guerin, 'these pictures are not for sale.' 'I know,' continued Miss Hazeltine, 'that the pictures have been in great demand, but I have never thought of selling them, and I never will.'"

The lady was much troubled about the rumor, and was extremely anxious to avoid publicity.

The reporter called at Mr. Guerin's establishment and found that none of the pictures could be bought without an order, so that the whole rumor proves to be without any foundation.

Mud Piles.

A couple of waggish fellows of the Salvage Corps, tired of looking at the landscape of mud along St. Charles street, heaped up two graves just in the rear of Jacob Merrell's drug store this morning. They adjusted hat and boots to give a realistic appearance to the mounds and mounted a headstone bearing the inscription "Overstolz." The city authorities took the hint, and this afternoon the street cleaners are plying their hoes all along St. Charles street.

Cotton Premiums.

A meeting of the Cotton Exchange will be held Thursday next at 10:30 a. m. to consider the subject of offering cotton premiums at the next Fair.

The Sergeant-at-Arms.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Senator Beck, in the Senate this afternoon, declared the purpose of the Democrats to continue opposition to Riddleberger, even after next December. He said Riddleberger was obnoxious to the Democratic Senators, and the latter could never hold proper official relations with him: that next December there would be nominated for Sergeant-at-Arms a gallant Union soldier, who bears wounds received in leading troops on the field of battle, and every Democratic Senator will vote for him and he believed the nomination would be by a Republican Senator. Senator Beck declared that Riddleberger would never be elected Sergeant-at-Arms. The gallant Union soldier referred to by Senator Beck is said to be a citizen of Kansas and a Republican, but Beck and his friends declined to give his name yet, saying only that he is a prominent Republican and popular man. Senator Vest intends, whenever the election of officers shall be reached, to nominate Gen. John D. Stevenson, of St. Louis, who was under Logan and one of his best fighters. When asked how he would vote with Stevenson as a candidate, Logan replied that he could say nothing but good of Stevenson, as he was one of the most gallant Generals of the Union Army and a true Republican.

ADDITIONAL SENATE PROCEEDINGS.

The debate was continued by Senators Dawes, Salisbury, Burnside and Breck. The latter argued against the right of the majority to elect officers at the extra session, and declared that in December next they would be willing to consider the resolution, but in his judgment Riddleberger would not in December be made Sergeant-at-Arms. The Virginia election would then be over, and if the Republicans did not tender another candidate, somebody else would tender for Sergent-at-Arms, one who was a conservative Republican, who had fought through the war in the Federal Army, who would be here with his wounds upon him, and then the Republicans could choose between a Confederate, repudiating Riddleberger, and that man who would be tendered to them, he thought, by a Republican Senator. It might as well be understood that in December next the Republicans would not put in Riddleberger, and any promises which he might make on Virginia would prove fallacious.

CATTLE—Butcher steers were selling right along at the strong prices of last week, and a goodly number were weighed up, but in shipping cattle the market was slow in opening. Receipts quite large; about 175 car loads in all, and the bulk of fair to good native steers. Reports from New York were to the effect that the run was large and prices were ½@½ ⅌ lb off from Friday. Chicago also had a big run and prices were lower towards 10 o'clock, and shippers and exporters began the inspection of cattle and some activity was witnessed at declines of 10@15c per 100 lbs on all grades, butcher cattle also coming in for a share of the declines. Up to the hour of going to press there was a great deal of activity, and no doubt everything will be sold by night. Feeding steers slightly lower, but selling; milch cows with calves scarce and wanted. Ruling quotations quiet.

Easter at the House of Refuge.

The Easter celebration at the House of Refuge was one long to be remembered, not only by the children but by a large concourse of many prominent citizens. The exercises began promptly at 3 o'clock—the music being led by the head master of the schools, Prof. Nath. W. Hunt. "Easter Morning," with words by Fannie Isabella Sherrick, was the first chorus, followed by "Bright Easter Skies;" music by Prof. Edmund Engler, of Washington University. Prayer by Rev. Dr. Shields, of the Presbyterian Church of South St. Louis. "Easter Bells," a joyous carol, was then sung, and by request was repeated later. The solo "All Things That Die," words by Mr. Nath. W. Hunt, and music by Prof. Engler, was then rendered: a very pretty terzetto, arranged by Mr. Hunt, then preceded the sermon by Rev. Benjamin E. Reed, D. D., of Mt. Calvary Episcopal Church. The doctor has a happy faculty for interesting children and his effort was a marked success. The hymn by Katharine H. Greene was well received and betokened careful training. The "piece de resistance" was the finale, the overture to "William Tell." In this the boys and girls showed their enthusiasm, their power and precision.

Prof. Hunt is to be congratulated on his success with these fresh young voices, for few choirs of children could sing such classic and difficult music without much labor on the part of the director. Among the visitors present were noticed: His honor Mayor Ewing, Speaker Marriot, Insurance Commissioner Reife, Col. Blossom, James E. Cowan, and daughters, Mrs. S. M. Burrows, matron of the Home of the Friendless, Mrs. George Partridge, Miss Fannie Isabelle Shernick, Miss Julia Schofield, Mrs. Annie Robertson Noxon, Mr. T. R. Gelwicks and ladies, Miss Agnes Dengremont and many others. At the conclusion of the service Mr. John D. Shaffer, the affable superintendent, conducted the visitors to the play-grounds, where the boys performed several military movements. On every hand cleanliness was the order, and the boys and girls looked well in their bright uniforms and are a credit to their teachers, the city and themselves.

THE best is always the cheapest. Therefore when using bottled beer at home take only C. Conrad & Co.'s Budweiser.

Victoria Cricket and Athletic Club.

A pleasant game of cricket was witnessed at the Red Stocking Park yesterday, though somewhat one sided, as the appended scores will testify, between the senior and junior members of the above club. The Seniors was selected and captained by Captain A. S. Treloar, and the Juniors by G. S. Rhodes. The game commenced with the Seniors taking the bat, but after a very short innings their last wicket was taken, having only made the small score of 32. The Junior's next taking the bat played a steady and watchful game, and at 3 o'clock when the wickets were drawn they had the handsome score of 85 to their account with 7 wickets to fall.

THE ROSY CROSS.

Mysterious Intimations of What the May Festival Will Be.

Appointment of a Committee on Invitations—The Masque and the March.

It was about half-past 9 o'clock yesterday evening when a POST-DISPATCH reporter boarded a Bridge and Tower car on Fourth and Washington avenue to go out to the Synod of the Rosy Cross. He is of course bound not to tell where the meetings were held, but those who are familiar with North St. Louis will easily recognize the haunt of the brotherhood when they understand that it is a great lonesome barn of a house garnished along its eastern front with a two story brick portico, standing alone upon one of the boreal bluffs. The reporter was no longer a neophyte; he had gained acolyteship, and consequently it was with a much more assured tread that he mounted the stairway and knocked at the great old fashioned door. Inside as before he waited in the hall way until a gentleman, well known on 'Change, came down to meet him and accompany him into the mystic assembly room. How entry was gained cannot be told, but it is sufficient to say that the assembly were gathered in a Lodge of Workmanship, and the Patriarch himself was standing before a brozier filled with glowing coals from which the vague, heavy sweetness of myrrh floated lazily up, addressing the council. He was unmasked, and out of his grave, kindly eyes beamed a light not of earth. "'Tis now eight centuries," said he, "since Gervaise of Nuremburg first discovered what an ignorant world calls the Philosopher's Stone, but what we who are illuminati know to be the Dew—the divine Ros—from which we derive our name. The discovery was in part an accidental one, but my father in the Rosy Cross Herman of the Neuf Chatel was his disciple, and before I had crossed the threshold he told me the story often. The alchemists of the middle ages had all addressed themselves to this problem, seeking the universal resolvent throughout the universe; some hunted midst the songsters of the fields, others in the human body; yet others, and among them was Gervaise, brought their knowledge of the supernatural to bear upon the problem with the result ye know? In my hand I hold a casket of the Dew. Go see it all," and he exhibited a little case covered with moresque filagree work in silver, but its own material being common sundried yellow clay. The inside of the case was white, as though even the clog was trying to burst the bonds that held it and join the nobler group of metals. He took with a clay spadule about as much of the gay and shining dust with which the box was filled as you could hold upon the point of a penknife and dropped it into a ewer of water which was before him. The water bubbled a little and the room was filled with a sudden and intoxicatingly sweet smell; forgotten melodies seemed to rush back to the memory and a feeling of keen joy burned in every breast. Then he took an ingot of lead which was lying upon the table and held it for a moment in the ewer. Taking it out he showed that it was yellow and golden in patches, but the process was not complete and the ingot was again dropped in the liquid. When it was again taken out the manager of a prominent Fifth street jewelry house examined it and pronounced it pure gold. To prove that there was no legerdemain about the facts every one that wished was permitted to submit any metal he would to the Sovereign Ros, and the result was at once a golden return.

"Here," said the Patriarch, "you see our power. We turn to gold all that we touch; let the people of St. Louis remember that. We do not come asking favors, but granting them, and our May festival will be found to be a golden shower upon this town. This is the meaning of the figure I have shown you here."

When the Patriarch concluded the lodge put itself in masque to rehearse the mystic work of May. Each of the gentlemen was speedily arrayed in robes of carnation with dominos of silk. The costumes were splendid ones, all silk and satin and figurative of the mysteries of the order. Banners of white silk bearing the owl, the fowl of Minerva, reposing upon the horn of the crescent moon, and also figured with the rose and cross, the inner symbols of the brotherhood. A gloomy dance was stepped to the music of haut-boys and other antique instruments. A procession was formed which made a stately march about the room, and then the music took a lighter turn and the soul inspiring fiddle lent its impetus to the fun. The mysteries of the evening were prophetic of the May time, and only the presence of lovely women was necessary to make the occasion all that the May time festival will be. A committee on invitations is already preparing a list of guests to be invited to the ball, and as the tickets to be issued are limited in number they will be extremely difficult to obtain. The rules laid down for the guidance of the committee are extremely rigid, and it is said that cards will only be issued up to a certain well defined number, and no power under the sun will avail to influence the committee of the Mysterious Brotherhood or make them complaisant.

POPE'S.

The holiday week at this house is marked by a special attraction—Jay Rial's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Combination. This is a double company, a jubilee band, five trained bloodhounds, a performing donkey, and other special features being included in the realistic presentation of the popular drama. There are two performances every day throughout the week.

THE OLYMPIC.

A debut, which is always a feature of interest to play-goers, will be made this evening at the Olympic. Miss Marie Dixon, of Memphis, appears in the role of Mariana in the play of "The Wife." The lady comes to the professional boards with the highest indorsements of those who have witnessed and admired her efforts at amateur performances in Memphis, and she is favored here with the excellent support of John W. Norton and a complete company. To-morrow Miss Dixon appears as Julia in the "Hunchback." On Wednesday there will be a special matinee, when Miss Julia Hunt will appear at the Olympic as Marie in the "Pearl of Savoy."

Lee Quintette Club.

The Lee Quintette Club, at its annual election last evening, selected the following officers for three months: Lee Denmire, president; Ed. McCann, secretary; Chas. Warren, financial secretary; Frank McDonald, treasurer; Frank Dunn, sergeant-at-arms; Tom Stanton, trustee. This Club will give a grand picnic about the middle of May, on which occasion they hope all their friends, will be on hand.

Cinderella.

The first presentation of the fairy extravaganza of "Cinderella," by Mrs. Agnes Benton's army of little children, will be given at Mercantile Library Hall to-night, when Miss Stella Perrier will be the Cinderella; Ase Pittman, Prince Poppetti; Lulu Melin, Dandini; Levi Hubble, the Baron, and Jennie Eitih, Clarinda. The programme embraces selections from "Olivette," "Bocaccio," the "Pirates of Penzance," "La Perichole" and other comic operas; solos, duets, quartettes and choruses will be sung by children in special costumes, and songs and dances will make another interesting feature. The toilets of the little artists will be very beautiful and elaborate, the parents having spared no pains or expense in preparing them. The eight baby boys and girls in the stately minuet will be attired in Louis XIV. costumes, white wigs, high ruchings and all.

THE Washington, D. C., Star, we notice refers to the case of Miss Harriet L. Dawson, the New York correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune under the nom-de-plume of "Drift," who was cured of very severe rheumatic pains in the back by the use of St. Jacobs Oil.

City Counsellor Bell at Work.

City Counsellor Bell goes to Jefferson City to-night to argue the case of the city against Richeson and others before the Supreme Court to-morrow. This case is one of the most important the city has had of late in the Supreme Court. It involves the validity of the present system of opening streets under the charter. The action is founded on a special tax bill for benefits assessed on a lot on Ninth street, in the opening of Walnut street, from Tenth to Twelfth street; and the owners of the lot, represented by Marshall & Barclay, are defending on the ground that they were not made parties to the original proceeding, and therefore their property is taken without due process of law. The constitutionality of the charter provision upon the subject is denied by the defendant.

Mr. Bell will also appear for Mayor Ewing and answer an application which it is expected will be made to the Supreme Court for a mandamus to compel the Mayor to proclaim the charter amendments, except numbers 11 and 12, voted on at the recent election, as carried.

It is conceded on all hands that it is desirable to have the question of the amendments settled by the Supreme Court in order to avoid litigation in the future, and the city government will do all in its power to aid in bringing on such a settlement.

It is understood that the mandamus will be applied for by Mr. Thos. Allen.

OUR NEIGHBOR'S DOG

When Old Man Jones reached home the other night, his mind was doubtless filled with pleasant fancies. He had been out for an "evening call" on some old friends, and, all unmindful of the lateness of the hour, he strolled leisurely along. Changeful fancies took possession of his heart; he was young again, and in reviewing his past life, thought of the many happy years he had passed with MARIA, the partner of his joys and sorrow. He thought of their home in the quiet village, where he had first resided, and a line or two from a favorite poem caught his wandering fancy:

"'Tis sweet to hear the watchdog's honest bark
Bay deep-mouthed welcome as we draw near home;
'Tis sweet to know there is an eye will mark
Our coming, and look brighter when we come."

So preoccupied was our friend that he failed to observe that he had straggled into the wrong yard, but was reminded of that fact in rather an unpleasant manner by losing one of his coat tails, and having a large patch taken out of his pants.

CAUSE—Our neighbor's dog.

RESULT—Visit to FAMOUS for a new Suit.
